Unit Overview

In this unit you will explore a variety of American voices and define what it is to be an American. If asked to describe the essence and spirit of America, you would probably refer to the American Dream. First coined as a phrase in 1931, the phrase “the American Dream” characterizes the unique promise that America has offered immigrants and residents for nearly 400 years. People have come to this country for adventure, opportunity, freedom, and the chance to experience the particular qualities of the American landscape.

Visual Prompt: How does this image juxtapose the promise and the reality of the American Dream?
Contents

Activities

1.1 Previewing the Unit ........................................................................................................ 4
1.2 Defining a Word, Idea, or Concept ................................................................. 5
1.3 America’s Promise........................................................................................................ 8
   Poetry: “The New Colossus,” by Emma Lazarus
   Speech: Excerpt from Address on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Statue of Liberty, by Franklin D. Roosevelt
1.4 America’s Voices ......................................................................................................... 12
   Poetry: “I Hear America Singing,” by Walt Whitman
   Poetry: “I, Too, Sing America,” by Langston Hughes
   Poetry: “America,” by Claude McKay
1.5 Fulfilling the Promise ............................................................................................... 16
   Short Story: “America and I,” by Anzia Yezierska
1.6 Defining an American ............................................................................................... 27
1.7 A Hyphenated American .......................................................................................... 32
   Essay: “Growing Up Asian in America,” by Kesaya E. Noda
1.8 Researching Images of America ............................................................................... 37
   Poetry: “Let America Be America Again,” by Langston Hughes
1.9 What Is Freedom? ...................................................................................................... 43
   Speech: Excerpt from “The Four Freedoms,” by Franklin Delano Roosevelt
   Historical Document: The Preamble to the Constitution of the United States
   Historical Document: The Bill of Rights
1.10 Strategies for Defining Freedom............................................................................. 48

Embedded Assessment 1: Writing a Definition Essay ............................................. 51

1.11 Previewing Embedded Assessment 2 and Synthesizing Ideas .................................. 53
1.12 Annotating an Argumentative Text ............................................  55

Argumentative Essay: “Is the American Dream Still Possible?”
by David Wallechinsky

1.13 The Structure of an Argument ...................................................  59

Historical Document: The Declaration of Independence

1.14 Coming for the American Dream ...............................................  64

Poetry: “Ellis Island,” by Joseph Bruchac
Poetry: “On Being Brought From Africa To America,”
by Phillis Wheatley
Poetry: “Europe and America,” by David Ignatow

1.15 Money and the American Dream ...............................................  68

Poetry: “Money,” by Dana Gioia
Drama: Excerpt from A Raisin in the Sun, by Lorraine Hansberry

1.16 Working Toward the Dream .......................................................  73

Poetry: “Who Burns for the Perfection of Paper,” by Martín Espada
Nonfiction: Excerpt from Working, “Roberto Acuna Talks About Farm Workers,” by Studs Terkel

1.17 The Road to Success .................................................................  78

Speech: Excerpt from Keynote Address to the 2004 Democratic National Convention, by Barack Obama
Essay: “The Right to Fail,” by William Zinsser

1.18 American Dream: Real or Imagined? .........................................  84

Embedded Assessment 2:  Synthesizing the American Dream ........... 87

---

Language and Writer’s Craft
- Using Direct Quotes (1.6)
- Quoting Original Sources (1.7)
- Transitions (1.10)
Learning Targets

• Preview the big ideas and vocabulary for the unit.
• Identify and analyze the skills and knowledge necessary for success in writing a definition essay.

Making Connections

In this unit, you will read a variety of texts and be asked to think about ideas and concepts that are “American.” For the first embedded assessment, you will define what it means to be an American. Some words, concepts, and ideas are too complex for a simple definition and require a multi-paragraph essay to define. Definitions also provide a writer the opportunity to clear up misconceptions about a concept or idea. You will learn to define a word or concept using four definition strategies: by example, by classification, by function, and by negation.

Essential Questions

Based on your current knowledge, how would you answer these questions?
1. How do writers use the strategies of definition to define a concept?

2. What is “the American Dream?”

Developing Vocabulary

Use QHT or another strategy to review the Academic Vocabulary and Literary Terms. Decide which ones you may know already and which ones will need additional study.

Unpacking Embedded Assessment 1

Closely read the assignment for Embedded Assessment 1: Writing a Definition Essay.

Your assignment is to write a multi-paragraph essay that defines your interpretation of what it means to be an American. This essay should use the strategies of definition and different perspectives from the unit to help you develop a complex and thoughtful definition. If possible, incorporate an iconic image in your essay.

With your class, create a graphic organizer as you “unpack” the requirements of Embedded Assessment 1. What knowledge must you have (what do you need to know) and what skills must you have (what must you be able to do) to be successful on this assignment?
Learning Targets

- Apply strategies to define words or concepts.
- Identify the use of exemplification to define a concept.

Defining a Word or Concept

1. Here are two ways to begin the process of creating an extended definition of a complex, general or abstract term, or concept:
   - Synonym: providing a synonym of the word or concept that has a similar meaning to add clarity
   - Formal definition: providing a formal definition of the word from a dictionary that offers a succinct explanation of the word or concept

Example: patriotism

Synonyms for the word patriotism: nationalism; partisanship; devotion

Synonyms identify words using words that are similar but have slightly different connotations to provide clarity and nuance to understanding.

Formal definition for the word patriotism: love for or devotion to one’s country

Formal definitions identify words and concepts in three parts: Word, Class, and Characteristics.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Word</th>
<th>Class</th>
<th>Characteristics</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Patriotism</td>
<td>love or devotion</td>
<td>to one’s country</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Extended Definitions

Extended definitions identify words or concepts using strategies to demonstrate a variety of ways the word or concept may be defined. Extended definitions are useful for providing a complete definition of a word, concept, or idea.

For a word as complex as patriotism, providing a synonym and definition from a dictionary does not offer enough depth.

You can extend any definition in a variety of ways:
- Exemplification—examples of patriotism
- Function—what patriotism acts like or functions as
- Classification—categorizing by type or kind of
- Negation—what patriotism is not

Definition Strategy: Exemplification

Successful extended definitions go beyond dictionary definitions to expand the definition in order to show the writer’s personal understanding. To extend a definition of a concept or term, writers use a variety of strategies. One definition strategy is to define by example by showing specific, relevant examples that fit the writer’s definition.
Before Reading
1. Think of some examples of what patriotism means to you.

During Reading
2. With your partner, find examples of exemplification in Senator McCain’s essay and explain how each adds to your understanding of his definition of patriotism. Examples of patriotism should answer the question: What are examples of patriots or patriotism?

ABOUT THE AUTHOR
John Sidney McCain III is the senior United States Senator from Arizona. He was the Republican presidential nominee in the 2008 United States election. McCain followed his father and grandfather, both four-star admirals, into the United States Navy, graduating from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1958. During the Vietnam War, in October 1967, while on a bombing mission over Hanoi, he was shot down, seriously injured, and captured by the North Vietnamese. He was a prisoner of war until 1973.

Essay

A Cause Greater Than Self

by Senator John McCain

1. Patriotism means more than holding your hand over your heart during the national anthem. It means more than walking into a voting booth every two or four years and pulling a lever. Patriotism is a love and a duty, a love of country expressed in good citizenship.

2. Patriotism and the citizenship it requires should motivate the conduct of public officials, but it also thrives in the communal spaces where government is absent, anywhere Americans come together to govern their lives and their communities—in families, churches, synagogues, museums, symphonies, the Little League, the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, the Salvation Army or the VFW. They are the habits and institutions that preserve democracy. They are the ways, small and large, we come together as one country, indivisible, with freedom and justice for all. They are the responsible exercise of freedom and are indispensable to the proper functioning of a democracy. Patriotism is countless acts of love, kindness and courage that have no witness or heraldry and are especially commendable because they are unrecorded.

3. The patriot must not just accept, but in his or her own way protect the ideals that gave birth to our country: to stand against injustice and for the rights of all and not just one's own interests. The patriot honors the duties, the loyalties, the inspirations and the habits of mind that bind us together as Americans.
4 We are the heirs and caretakers of freedom—a blessing preserved with the blood of heroes down through the ages. One cannot go to Arlington Cemetery and see name upon name, grave upon grave, row upon row, without being deeply moved by the sacrifice made by those young men and women.

5 And those of us who live in this time, who are the beneficiaries of their sacrifice, must do our smaller and less dangerous part to protect what they gave everything to defend, lest we lose our own love of liberty.

6 Love of country is another way of saying love of your fellow countrymen—a truth I learned a long time ago in a country very different from ours. Patriotism is another way of saying service to a cause greater than self-interest.

7 If you find faults with our country, make it a better one. If you are disappointed with the mistakes of government, join its ranks and work to correct them. I hope more Americans would consider enlisting in our armed forces. I hope more would consider running for public office or working in federal, state and local governments. But there are many public causes where your service can make our country a stronger, better one than we inherited.

8 The good citizen and patriot knows happiness is greater than comfort, more sublime than pleasure. The cynical and indifferent know not what they miss. For their mistake is an impediment not only to our progress as a civilization but to their happiness as individuals.

After Reading

3. With a partner, create a graphic organizer that organizes the additional information provided by the essay on the word patriot. Review the synonym and formal definition of the word.

Check Your Understanding

Writing Prompt: Using a passage from McCain’s essay, write about one way this extended definition expanded your understanding of the word patriot. Be sure to:
• Indicate what passage you are using as a reference.
• Explain your expanded or new understanding.
• Use appropriate transitions to connect ideas.
Learning Targets

- Analyze multiple forms of communication (an illustration, a speech, and a poem) to identify major ideas.
- Generate a definition with textual support.

Before Reading

1. The Statue of Liberty has long been a welcoming figure to the millions of immigrants who have come to the United States of America. What feelings or thoughts do you think people might have when looking at the Statue of Liberty for the first time as a new arrival to this country?

Source: “An ocean steamer passing the Statue of Liberty: Scene on the Steerage Deck,” from Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper, July 2, 1887. Reproduced by permission of Accessible Archives.

2. When looking at a primary source such as this illustration, it is important to consider both the message and context of the source. The following guiding questions will help you think about the source and its context:
   - What point is the source trying to convey?
   - What is the source of the illustration and why is that important?
   - Why might the date of the source be significant?

3. With a partner, preview the text on the next page, using the questions to guide your thinking about a primary source.
During Reading

4. As you read the sonnet written for and placed on a plaque on the Statue of Liberty, annotate the places in the text where you see the connections to the imagery of the illustration on the previous page.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Emma Lazarus was born in 1849 in New York. She was educated by private tutors and became a prolific reader. She began writing poems as a child and later wrote magazine articles and essays, as well as five-act dramas. Her poem “The New Colossus” grew, at least in part, out of her advocacy for Jewish immigrants.

Poetry

THE NEW COLOSSUS

by Emma Lazarus

Not like the brazen giant of Greek fame
With conquering limbs astride from land to land;
Here at our sea-washed, sunset gates shall stand
A mighty woman with a torch, whose flame
Is the imprisoned lightning, and her name
Mother of Exiles. From her beacon-hand
Gloows world-wide welcome; her mild eyes command
The air-bridged harbor that twin cities frame, “Keep, ancient lands, your storied pomp!” cries she
With silent lips. “Give me your tired, your poor,
Your huddled masses yearning to breathe free,
The wretched refuse of your teeming shore,
Send these, the homeless, tempest-tossed to me,
I lift my lamp beside the golden door!”

KEY IDEAS AND DETAILS

Why is the Statue of Liberty called “the Mother of Exiles” and what does the torch symbolize? Quote evidence from the poem as a basis for your answer.

GRAMMAR & USAGE

Hyphen

Writers use a hyphen to join two or more words in order to create a single adjective or concept. Notice some examples from the poem: sea-washed, world-wide, air-bridge, tempest-tossed. These words are compound adjectives. When preceding the noun they modify, compound adjectives are hyphenated. When following the noun, they may not be. Check a reference to be sure.
America’s Promise

During Reading
5. As you read the following speech, annotate the text for key ideas and details used by the speaker to describe America and its promise to the people of the world. How do Roosevelt’s words connect to the imagery of the previous texts?

ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Franklin Delano Roosevelt (1882–1945) was the 32nd President of the United States. He delivered the following address in 1936 to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty.

Speech
Address on the Occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Statue of Liberty
October 28, 1936

by President Franklin D. Roosevelt

1 “… It is the memory of all these eager seeking millions that makes this one of America’s places of great romance. Looking down this great harbor I like to think of the countless numbers of inbound vessels that have made this port. I like to think of the men and women who, with the break of dawn off Sandy Hook, have strained their eyes to the west for a first glimpse of the New World.

2 They came to us—most of them—in steerage. But they, in their humble quarters, saw things in these strange horizons which were denied to the eyes of those few who traveled in greater luxury.

3 They came to us speaking many tongues—but a single language, the universal language of human aspiration.1

4 How well their hopes were justified is proved by the record of what they achieved. They not only found freedom in the New World, but by their effort and devotion, they made the New World’s freedom safer, richer, more far-reaching, more capable of growth.

5 Within this present generation, that stream from abroad has largely stopped. We have within our shores today the materials out of which we shall continue to build an even better home for liberty.

6 We take satisfaction in the thought that those who have left their native land to join us may still retain here their affection for some things left behind—old customs, old language, old friends. Looking to the future, they wisely choose that their children shall live in the new language and in the new customs of this new people. And those children more and more realize their common destiny in America. That is true whether their forebears came past this place eight generations ago or only one.

1 aspiration (n.): hope or ambition
The realization that we are all bound together by hope of a common future rather than by reverence for a common past has helped us to build upon this continent a unity unapproached in any similar area or population in the whole world. For all our millions of square miles, for all our millions of people, there is a unity in language and speech, in law and in economics, in education and in general purpose, which nowhere finds its match.

It was the hope of those who gave us this Statue and the hope of the American people in receiving it that the Goddess of Liberty and the Goddess of Peace were the same.

The grandfather of my old friend the French Ambassador and those who helped him make this gift possible, were citizens of a great sister Republic established on the principle of the democratic form of government. Citizens of all democracies unite in their desire for peace. Grover Cleveland recognized that unity of purpose on this spot fifty years ago.

He suggested that liberty enlightening the world would extend her rays from these shores to every other Nation.

Today that symbolism should be broadened. To the message of liberty which America sends to all the world must be added her message of peace.

Even in times as troubled and uncertain as these, I still hold to the faith that a better civilization than any we have known is in store for America and by our example, perhaps, for the world. Here destiny seems to have taken a long look. Into this continental reservoir there has been poured untold and untapped wealth of human resources. Out of that reservoir, out of the melting pot, the rich promise which the New World held out to those who came to it from many lands is finding fulfillment.

The richness of the promise has not run out. If we keep the faith for our day as those who came before us kept the faith for theirs, then you and I can smile with confidence into the future. It is fitting therefore, that this should be a service of rededication, rededication to the liberty and the peace which this statue symbolizes.

After Reading

6. With a partner, share your annotations and connections among the texts. Together, narrow your notes down to the two most significant and relevant connections. Find another pair of partners, share your connections, and identify the two most significant and relevant details. Create a statement that explains your conclusion and share it with the class. As a class, discuss criteria for identifying quality details and provide support from the text.

Check Your Understanding

Writing Prompt: Write a well-developed text using details from the illustration, the speech, and the poem to define the promise of America for those who come to the United States. Use the definition strategy of exemplification, or defining with examples. Be sure to:

- Include a clearly stated thesis that states the definition of the promise of America.
- Explain the most significant and relevant details from the texts with commentary.
- Use definition strategies effectively to define the promise of America.
Learning Targets

• Analyze a literary work to identify the relationship between tone, imagery, and diction.
• Support claims with appropriate textual evidence.

Before Reading

1. Tone is an important element of any poem’s impact. Explain how a writer creates the tone of a piece.

During Reading

2. As you read the following foundational poems from celebrated American authors, note the nuance of tone created by diction and imagery. Annotate the poems for important diction and imagery.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Walt Whitman (1819–1892), who did not attend college, worked as a journalist, carpenter, and building contractor before publishing a collection of his poems, Leaves of Grass, in 1855. Calling himself the “people’s poet,” Whitman’s foundational work features free verse, uses common speech patterns, and celebrates the country’s working class and cultural diversity.

Poetry

I Hear America Singing

by Walt Whitman

I hear America singing, the varied carols I hear,
Those of mechanics, each one singing his as it should be blithe and strong,
The carpenter singing his as he measures his plank or beam,
The mason singing his as he makes ready for work, or leaves off work,
5 The boatman singing what belongs to him in his boat, the deckhand singing on the steamboat deck,
The shoemaker singing as he sits on his bench, the hatter singing as he stands,
The woodcutter’s song, the plowboy’s on his way in the morning, or at noon intermission or at sundown.
The delicious singing of the mother, or of the young wife at work, or of the girl sewing or washing,
Each singing what belongs to him or her and to none else.
10 The day what belongs to the day—at night the party of young fellows, robust, friendly, Singing with open mouths their strong melodious songs.
ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Langston Hughes (1902–1967) wrote numerous works of prose, poetry, and drama. Fascinated with jazz rhythms and lyrics of blues music, Hughes became a major figure in the Harlem Renaissance. His first book of poetry,

The Weary Blues, was published in 1926. His works capture and celebrate culture of black America.

Poetry

I, Too, Sing America

by Langston Hughes

I, too, sing America.
I am the darker brother.
They send me to eat in the kitchen
When company comes,

5 But I laugh,
And eat well,
And grow strong.
Tomorrow,
I’ll be at the table

10 When company comes.
Nobody’ll dare
Say to me,
“Eat in the kitchen,”
Then.

15 Besides,
They’ll see how beautiful I am
And be ashamed—
I, too, am America.

After Reading

3. Use the chart to compare tone, diction, and imagery in the two poems.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Tone</th>
<th>Diction and Imagery That Reveal Tone</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>“I Hear America Singing”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“I, Too, Sing America”</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
During Reading

4. As you read, mark the text for imagery and for words that communicate tone.

ABO UT THE AUTHOR
Born in 1890 in Jamaica, Claude McKay traveled to America to attend college, where he experienced the harsh realities of racism. He wrote poetry on political and social concerns and became a major writer of the Harlem Renaissance, a movement in the early 1920s.

Poetry

“America”

by Claude McKay

Although she feeds me bread of bitterness,
And sinks into my throat her tiger’s tooth,
Stealing my breath of life, I will confess
I love this cultured hell that tests my youth!

Her vigor /f_l  ows like tides into my blood,
Giving me strength erect against her hate.
Her bigness sweeps my being like a /f_l  ood.
Yet as a rebel fronts a king in state,
I stand within her walls with not a shred

10

Of terror, malice, not a word of jeer.
Darkly I gaze into the days ahead,
And see her might and granite wonders there,
Beneath the touch of Time’s unerring hand,
Like priceless treasures sinking in the sand.

After Reading

5. What is the tone of this poem? What textual evidence presents this tone?

6. Choose one of the two prompts on the next page to discuss how tone and theme are similar and different.
Prompt 1: “I Hear America Singing” and “I Too Sing America” both refer to “singing” of America. Think about the definition and connotation of “to sing.” How are these two poems similar and how do they differ? Explain your answer by using details of diction and imagery.

Prompt 2: Claude McKay and Langston Hughes wrote during the same period in America’s literary history. Their writing deals with similar themes concerning the experience of African-Americans. After analyzing the poem, “America,” explain how the tone and theme of Claude McKay’s poem is similar to that of Langston Hughes’s poem, “I, Too, Sing America.” Use support from the diction and imagery of the poems to support your thinking.
Fulfilling the Promise

LEARNING STRATEGIES:
SIFT, Think-Pair-Share, Discussion Groups, Marking the Text

Learning Targets
- Identify the most significant and relevant details from a larger group.
- Analyze the relationship between tone and how a work is structured.

Before Reading
1. Reflect on the Essential Question What does it mean to be an American? Think about the illustration in Activity 1.2. What would it mean to be one of the millions of immigrants coming to the United States for a new life?

During Reading
2. Throughout “America and I,” the narrator’s attitude toward America evolves as she establishes her life in a new country. For each chunk of the short story, annotate in the My Notes space by choosing words to describe the tone of narrator’s attitude toward America. Use two or three examples of diction, imagery, and details from the story as evidence to justify your identification of tone.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Anzia Yezierska (1885–1970) was an American novelist born in Poland. “America and I,” originally appearing in 1923 in Children of Loneliness, is one of three semi-autobiographical articles in the book. While all of Yezierska’s work takes as its most important theme the immigrant’s creation of her place in America, in “America and I,” she addresses these issues in a more direct manner.

Short Story
America and I
by Anzia Yezierska

Chunk 1
1 As one of the dumb, voiceless ones I speak. One of the millions of immigrants beating, beating out their hearts at your gates for a breath of understanding.
2 Ach! America! From the other end of the earth from where I came, America was a land of living hope, woven of dreams, aflame with longing and desire.
3 Choked for ages in the airless oppression of Russia, the Promised Land rose up—wings for my stifled spirit—sunlight burning through my darkness—freedom singing to me in my prison—deathless songs tuning prison-bars into strings of a beautiful violin.
4 I arrived in America. My young, strong body, my heart and soul pregnant with the unlived lives of generations clamoring for expression.
5 What my mother and father and their mother and father never had a chance to give out in Russia, I would give out in America. The hidden sap of centuries would find release; colors that never saw light—songs that died unvoiced—romance that never had a chance to blossom in the black life of the Old World.
6 In the golden land of flowing opportunity I was to find my work that was denied me in the sterile village of my forefathers. Here I was to be free from the dead drudgery for bread that held me down in Russia. For the first time in America, I’d cease to be a slave of the belly. I’d be a creator, a giver, a human being! My work would be the living job of fullest self-expression.

7 But from my high visions, my golden hopes, I had to put my feet down on earth. I had to have food and shelter. I had to have the money to pay for it.

8 I was in America, among the Americans, but not of them. No speech, no common language, no way to win a smile of understanding from them, only my young, strong body and my untried faith. Only my eager, empty hands, and my full heart shining from my eyes!

Chunk 2

9 God from the world! Here I was with so much richness in me, but my mind was not wanted without the language. And my body, unskilled, untrained, was not even wanted in the factory. Only one of two chances was left open to me: the kitchen, or minding babies.

10 My first job was as a servant in an Americanized family. Once, long ago, they came from the same village from where I came. But they were so well-dressed, so well-fed, so successful in America, that they were ashamed to remember their mother tongue.

11 “What were to be my wages?” I ventured timidly, as I looked up to the well-fed, well-dressed “American” man and woman.

12 They looked at me with a sudden coldness. What have I said to draw away from me their warmth? Was it so low for me to talk of wages? I shrank back into myself like a low-down bargainer. Maybe they’re so high up in well-being they can’t any more understand my low thoughts for money.

13 From his rich height the man preached down to me that I must not be so grabbing for wages. Only just landed from the ship and already thinking about money when I should be thankful to associate with “Americans.” The woman, out of her smooth, smiling fatness assured me that this was my chance for a summer vacation in the country with her two lovely children.

14 My great chance to learn to be a civilized being, to become an American by living with them.

15 So, made to feel that I was in the hands of American friends, invited to share with them their home, their plenty, their happiness, I pushed out from my head the worry for wages. Here was my first chance to begin my life in the sunshine, after my long darkness. My laugh was all over my face as I said to them: “I’ll trust myself to you. What I’m worth you’ll give me.” And I entered their house like a child by the hand.

16 The best of me I gave them. Their house cares were my house cares. I got up early. I worked till late. All that my soul hungered to give I put into the passion with which I scrubbed floors, scoured pots, and washed clothes. I was so grateful to mingle with the American people, to hear the music of the American language, that I never knew tiredness.

17 There was such a freshness in my brains and such a willingness in my heart I could go on and on—not only with the work of the house, but work with my head—learning new words from the children, the grocer, the butcher, the iceman. I was not even afraid to ask for words from the policeman on the street. And every new word made me see new American things with American eyes. I felt like a Columbus, finding new worlds through every new word.

18 But words alone were only for the inside of me. The outside of me still branded me for a steerage immigrant. I had to have clothes to forget myself that I’m a stranger yet. And so I had to have money to buy these clothes.

19 The month was up. I was so happy! Now I’d have money. My own, earned money. Money to buy a new shirt on my back—shoes on my feet. Maybe yet an American dress and hat!

20 Ach! How high rose my dreams! How plainly I saw all that I would do with my visionary wages shining like a light over my head!

21 In my imagination I already walked in my new American clothes. How beautiful I looked as I saw myself like a picture before my eyes! I saw how I would throw away my immigrant rags tied up in my immigrant shawl. With money to buy—free money in my hands—I’d show them that I could look like an American in a day.

22 Like a prisoner in his last night in prison, counting the seconds that will free him from his chains, I trembled breathlessly for the minute I’d get the wages in my hand.

23 Before dawn I rose.

24 I shined up the house like a jewel-box.

25 I prepared breakfast and waited with my heart in my mouth for my lady and gentleman to rise. At last I heard them stirring. My eyes were jumping out of my head to them when I saw them coming in and seating themselves by the table.

26 Like a hungry cat rubbing up to its boss for meat, so I edged and simpered around them as I passed them the food. Without my will, like a beggar, my hand reached out to them.

27 The breakfast was over. And no word yet from my wages.

28 “Gottungi! I thought to myself. “Maybe they’re so busy with their own things, they forgot it’s the day for my wages. Could they who have everything know what I was to do with my first American dollars? How could they, soaking in plenty, how could they feel the longing and the fierce hunger in me, pressing up through each visionary dollar? How could they know the gnawing ache of my avid finges for the feel of my own, earned dollars? My dollars that I could spend like a free person. My dollars that would make me feel with everybody alike!”

29 Lunch came. Lunch passed.

30 Oi-i weh! Not a word yet about my money.

31 It was near dinner. And not a word yet about my wages.

32 I began to set the table. But my head—it swam away from me. I broke a glass. The silver dropped from my nervous fingers. I couldn’t stand it any longer. I dropped everything and rushed over to my American lady and gentleman.

33 “Oi weh! The money—my money—my wages!” I cried breathlessly.

34 Four cold eyes turned on me.

35 “Wages? Money?” The four eyes turned into hard stone as they looked me up and down. “Haven’t you a comfortable bed to sleep, and three good meals a day? You’re only a month here. Just came to America. And you already think about money. Wait till you’re worth any money. What use are you without knowing English? You should be glad we keep you here. It’s like a vacation for you. Other girls pay money yet to be in the country.”

36 It went black for my eyes. I was so choked no words came to my lips. Even the tears went dry in my throat.

Chunk 3
37 I left. Not a dollar for all my work.

38 For a long, long time my heart ached and ached like a sore wound. If murderers would have robbed me and killed me it wouldn’t have hurt me so much. I couldn’t think through my pain. The minute I’d see before me how they looked at me, the words they said to me—then everything began to bleed in me. And I was helpless.

39 For a long, long time the thought of ever working in an “American” family made me tremble with fear, like the fear of wild wolves. No—never again would I trust myself to an “American” family, no matter how fine their language and how sweet their smile.

40 It was blotted out in me all trust in friendship from “Americans.” But the life in me still burned to live. The hope in me still craved to hope. In darkness, in dirt, in hunger and want, but only to live on!

41 There had been no end to my day—working for the “American” family.

42 Now rejecting false friendships from higher-ups in America, I turned back to the Ghetto. I worked on a hard bench with my own kind on either side of me. I knew before I began what my wages were to be. I knew what my hours were to be. And I knew the feeling of the end of the day.

43 From the outside my second job seemed worse than the first. It was in a sweatshop of a Delancey Street basement, kept up by an old, wrinkled woman that looked like a black witch of greed. My work was sewing on buttons. While the morning was still dark, I walked into a dark basement. And darkness met me when I turned out of the basement.

44 Day after day, week after week, all the contact I got with America was handling dead buttons. The money I earned was hardly enough to pay for bread and rent. I didn’t have a room to myself. I didn’t even have a bed. I slept on a mattress on the floor in a rat-hole of a room occupied by a dozen other immigrants. I was always hungry—oh, so hungry! The scant meals I could afford only sharpened my appetite for real food. But I felt myself better off than working in the “American” family where I had three good meals a day and a bed to myself. With all the hunger and darkness of the sweat-shop, I had at least the evening to myself. And all night was mine. When all were asleep, I used to creep up on the roof of the tenement and talk out my heart in silence to the stars in the sky.

45 “Who am I? What am I? What do I want with my life? Where is America? Is there an America? What is this wilderness in which I’m lost?”

46 I’d hurl my questions and then think and think. And I could not tear it out of me, the feeling that America must be somewhere, somehow—only I couldn’t find it—my America, where I would work for love and not for a living. I was like a thing following blindly after something far off in the dark!

47 “Oi weh.” I’d stretch out my hand up in the air. “My head is so lost in America. What’s the use of all my working if I’m not in it? Dead buttons is not me.”
Then the busy season started in the shop. The mounds of buttons grew and grew. The long day stretched out longer. I had to begin with the buttons earlier and stay with them till later in the night. The old witch turned into a huge greedy maw for wanting more and more buttons.

For a glass of tea, for a slice of herring over black bread, she would buy us up to stay another and another hour, till there seemed no end to her demands. One day, the light of self-assertion broke into my cellar darkness. "I don't want the tea. I don't want your herring," I said with terrible boldness "I only want to go home. I only want the evening to myself!"

"You fresh mouth, you!" cried the old witch. "You learned already too much in America. I want no clock-watchers in my shop. Out you go!"

I was driven out to cold and hunger. I could no longer pay for my mattress on the floor. I no longer could buy the bite in my mouth. I walked the streets. I knew what it is to be alone in a strange city, among strangers.

But I laughed through my tears. So I learned too much already in America because I wanted the whole evening to myself? Well America has yet to teach me still more: how to get not only the whole evening to myself, but a whole day a week like the American workers.

That sweat-shop was a bitter memory but a good school. It fitted me for a regular factory. I could walk in boldly and say I could work at something, even if it was only sewing on buttons.

Gradually, I became a trained worker. I worked in a light, airy factory, only eight hours a day. My boss was no longer a sweater and a blood-squeezer. The first freshness of the morning was mine. And the whole evening was mine. All day Sunday was mine.

Now I had better food to eat. I slept on a better bed. Now, I even looked dressed up like the American-born. But inside of me I knew that I was not yet an American. I choked with longing when I met an American-born, and I could say nothing.

Something cried dumb in me. I couldn't help it. I didn't know what it was I wanted. I only knew I wanted. Like the hunger in the heart that never gets food.

An English class for foreigners started in our factory. The teacher had such a good, friendly face, her eyes looked so understanding, as if she could see right into my heart. So I went to her one day for an advice:

"I don't know what is with me the matter," I began. "I have no rest in me. I never yet done what I want."

"What is it you want to do, child?" she asked me.

"I want to do something with my head, my feelings. All day long, only with my hands I work."

"First you must learn English." She patted me as if I was not yet grown up. "Put your mind on that, and then we'll see."

So for a time I learned the language. I could almost begin to think with English words in my head. But in my heart the emptiness still hurt. I burned to give, to give something, to do something, to be something. The dead work with my hands was killing me. My work left only hard stones on my heart.
Again I went to our factory teacher and cried out to her: “I know already to read and write the English language, but I can’t put it into words what I want. What is it in me so different that can’t come out?”

She smiled at me down from her calmness as if I were a little bit out of my head.

“What do you want to do?”

“I feel. I see. I hear. And I want to think it out. But I’m like dumb in me. I only know I’m different—different from everybody.”

She looked at me close and said nothing for a minute. “You ought to join one of the social clubs of the Women’s Association,” she advised.

“What’s the Women’s Association?” I implored greedily.

“A group of American women who are trying to help the working-girl find herself. They have a special department for immigrant girls like you.”

I joined the Women’s Association. On my first evening there they announced a lecture: “The Happy Worker and His Work,” by the Welfare director of the United Mills Corporation.

“Is there such a thing as a happy worker at his work?” I wondered. Happiness is only by working at what you love. And what poor girl can ever find it to work at what she loves? My old dreams about my America rushed through my mind. Once I thought that in America everybody works for love. Nobody has to worry for a living. Maybe this welfare man came to show me the real America that till now I sought in vain.

With a lot of polite words the head lady of the Women’s Association introduced a higher-up that looked like the king of kings of business. Never before in my life did I ever see a man with such a sureness in his step, such power in his face, such friendly positiveness in his eye as when he smiled upon us.

“Efficiency is the new religion of business,” he began. “In big business houses, even in up-to-date factories, they no longer take the first comer and give him any job that happens to stand empty. Efficiency begins at the employment office. Experts are hired for the one purpose, to find out how best to fit the worker to his work. It’s economy for the boss to make the worker happy.” And then he talked a lot more on efficiency in educated language that was over my head.

I didn’t know exactly what it meant—efficiency—but if it was to make the worker happy at his work, then that’s what I had been looking for since I came to America. I only felt from watching him that he was happy by his job. And as I looked on the clean, well-dressed, successful one, who wasn’t ashamed to say he rose from an office-boy, it made me feel that I, too, could lift myself up for a person.

He finished his lecture, telling us about the Vocational Guidance Center that the Women’s Association started.

The very next evening I was at the Vocational Guidance Center. There I found a young, college-looking woman. Smartness and health shining from her eyes! She, too, looked as if she knew her way in America. I could tell at the first glance: here is a person that is happy by what she does.

“I feel you’ll understand me,” I said right away.

She leaned over with pleasure in her face: “I hope I can.”
Fulfilling the Promise

I'm different.”

She gave me a quick, puzzled look from the corner of her eyes. “What are you doing now?”

“I'm the quickest shirtwaist hand on the floor. But my heart wastes away by such work. I think and think, and my thoughts can't come out.”

“Why don’t you think out your thoughts in shirtwaists? You could learn to be a designer. Earn more money.”

“I don’t want to look on waists. If my hands are sick from waists, how could my head learn to put beauty into them?”

“But you must earn your living at what you know, and rise slowly from job to job.”

I looked at her office sign: “Vocational Guidance.” “What's your vocational guidance?” I asked. “How to rise from job to job—how to earn more money?”

The smile went out from her eyes. But she tried to be kind yet. “What do you want?” she asked, with a sigh of last patience.

“I want America to want me.”

She fell back in her chair, thunderstruck with my boldness. But yet, in a low voice of educated self-control, she tried to reason with me:

“You have to show that you have something special for America before America has need of you.”

“But I never had a chance to find out what's in me, because I always had to work for a living. Only, I feel it's efficiency for America to find out what's in me so different, so I could give it out by my work.”

Her eyes half closed as they bored through me. Her mouth opened to speak, but no words came from her lips. So I flamed up with all that was choking in me like a house on fire:

“America gives free bread and rent to criminals in prison. They got grand houses with sunshine, fresh air, doctors and teachers, even for the crazy ones. Why don't they have free boarding-schools for immigrants—strong people—willing people? Here you see us burning up with something different, and America turns her head away from us.”

Her brows lifted and dropped down. She shrugged her shoulders away from me with the look of pity we give to cripples and hopeless lunatics. "America is no Utopia. First you must become efficient in earning a living before you can indulge in your poetic dreams.”

I went away from the vocational guidance office with all the air out of my lungs. All the light out of my eyes. My feet dragged after me like dead wood.

Till now there had always lingered a rosy veil of hope over my emptiness, a hope that a miracle would happen. I would open up my eyes some day and suddenly find the America of my dreams. As a young girl hungry for love sees always before her eyes the picture of lover's arms around her, so I saw always in my heart the vision of Utopian America.

But now I felt that the America of my dreams never was and never could be. Reality had hit me on the head as with a club. I felt that the America that I sought was nothing but a shadow—an echo—a chimera of lunatics and crazy immigrants.
98 Stripped of all illusion, I looked about me. The long desert of wasting days of drudgery stared me in the face. The drudgery that I had lived through, and the endless drudgery still ahead of me rose over me like a withering wilderness of sand. In vain were all my cryings, in vain were all frantic efforts of my spirit to find the living waters of understanding for my perishing lips. Sand, sand was everywhere. With every seeking, every reaching out I only lost myself deeper and deeper in a vast sea of sand.

99 I knew now the American language. And I knew now, if I talked to the Americans from morning till night, they could not understand what the Russian soul of me wanted. They could not understand me any more than if I talked to them in Chinese. Between my soul and the American soul were worlds of difference that no words could bridge over. What was that difference? What made the Americans so far apart from me?

100 I began to read the American history. I found from the first pages that America started with a band of Courageous Pilgrims. They had left their native country as I had left mine. They had crossed an unknown ocean and landed in an unknown country, as I.

101 But the great difference between the first Pilgrims and me was that they expected to make America, build America, create their own world of liberty. I wanted to find it ready made.

102 I read on. I delved deeper down into the American history. I saw how the Pilgrim Fathers came to a rocky desert country, surrounded by Indian savages on all sides. But undaunted, they pressed on—through danger—through famine, pestilence, and want—they pressed on. They did not ask the Indians for sympathy, for understanding. They made no demands on anybody, but on their own indomitable spirit of persistence.

103 And I—I was forever begging a crumb of sympathy, a gleam of understanding from strangers who could not understand.

104 I, when I encountered a few savage Indian scalpers, like the old witch of the sweat-shop, like my “Americanized” countryman, who cheated me of my wages—I, when I found myself on the lonely, untrodden path through which all seekers of the new world must pass, I lost heart and said: “There is no America”

105 Then came a light—a great revelation! I saw America—a big idea—a deathless hope—a world still in the making. I saw that it was the glory of America that it was not yet finished. And I, the last comer, had her share to give, small or great, to the making of America, like those Pilgrims who came in the Mayflower.

106 Fired up by this revealing light, I began to build a bridge of understanding between the American-born and myself. Since their life was shut out from such as me, I began to open up my life and the lives of my people to them. And life draws life. In only writing about the Ghetto I found America.

107 Great chances have come to me. But in my heart is always a deep sadness. I feel like a man who is sitting down to a secret table of plenty, while his near ones and dear ones are perishing before his eyes. My very joy in doing the work I love hurts me like secret guilt, because all about me I see so many with my longings, my burning eagerness, to do and to be, wasting their days in drudgery they hate, merely to buy bread and pay rent. And America is losing all that richness of the soul.

108 The Americans of tomorrow, the America that is every day nearer coming to be, will be too wise, too open-hearted, too friendly-handed, to let the least lastcomer at their gates knock in vain with his gifts unwanted.

WORD MEANINGS

The word \textit{drudgery} is a noun meaning “dull, hard, menial, or monotonous work.” A drudge, also a noun, is someone who does dull work.
After Reading

3. In a small group, share the tone words you listed and the textual evidence from the short story. With the following prompt in mind, craft a thesis statement and evaluate your existing evidence for the most significant and relevant details to support your thinking. Independently complete the timed writing assignment, using the work generated by your group as a starting point.

Timed-Writing Prompt: Throughout Yezierska’s narrative, the tone evolves as her experience broadens. Write an essay analyzing how the structure of the narrative guides this evolution in the tone of the short story. What can you infer about her attitude toward America by the end? Be sure to:

• Include a strong thesis that introduces the evolving tone of the narrative.
• Support your thinking using diction, imagery, and detail from the narrative.
• Include textual evidence in the form of quotations.

Literary Terms

Structure refers to the way a literary work is organized. Narrative structure refers to an organization characterized by a series of incidents illustrating a central conflict. An expository work is characterized by explanations, including examples and definitions.
Analyzing Sentence Structure and Variety

Analyzing sentence structure can help you improve your writing. Analyze a portion of the narrative you just read by completing the following chart as your teacher directs. Afterward, reflect on what the chart tells you about sentences in this particular text. What might using this chart tell you about your own writing?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Sentence Number</th>
<th>First Four Words</th>
<th>Verbs</th>
<th>Number of Words per Sentence</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>As one of the</td>
<td>speak</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Varying Sentence Openings

This advice for varying sentence openings comes from Purdue University's Online Writing Lab:

“If too many sentences start with the same word, especially “The,” “It,” “This,” or “I,” prose can grow tedious for readers, so changing opening words and phrases can be refreshing. On the next page are alternative openings for a standard sentence. Notice that different beginnings can alter not only the structure but also the emphasis of the sentence. They may also require rephrasing in sentences before or after this one, meaning that one change could lead to an abundance of sentence variety.”
Example:
The biggest coincidence that day happened when David and I ended up sitting next to each other at the Super Bowl.

Possible Revisions:
• Coincidentally, David and I ended up sitting right next to each other at the Super Bowl.
• In an amazing coincidence, David and I ended up sitting next to each other at the Super Bowl.
• Sitting next to David at the Super Bowl was a tremendous coincidence.
• But the biggest coincidence that day happened when David and I ended up sitting next to each other at the Super Bowl.
• When I sat down at the Super Bowl, I realized that I was directly next to David.
• By sheer coincidence, I ended up sitting directly next to David at the Super Bowl.
• With over 50,000 fans at the Super Bowl, it took an incredible coincidence for me to end up sitting right next to David.
• What are the odds that I would have ended up sitting right next to David at the Super Bowl?
• David and I, without any prior planning, ended up sitting right next to each other at the Super Bowl.
• Without any prior planning, David and I ended up sitting right next to each other at the Super Bowl.
• At the crowded Super Bowl, packed with 50,000 screaming fans, David and I ended up sitting right next to each other by sheer coincidence.
• Though I hadn’t made any advance arrangements with David, we ended up sitting right next to each other at the Super Bowl.
• Many amazing coincidences occurred that day, but nothing topped sitting right next to David at the Super Bowl.
• Unbelievable, I know, but David and I ended up sitting right next to each other at the Super Bowl.
• Guided by some bizarre coincidence, David and I ended up sitting right next to each other at the Super Bowl.

Check Your Understanding
After completing the table and reviewing the various ways to start a sentence, noting the variety of phrases and clauses that are used to vary sentence openings, review your Timed Writing with a partner. Analyze your sentences, looking specifically at the beginnings of your sentences. Select a few sentences and revise them by varying sentence beginnings and length.
Defining an American

Learning Targets

- Generate an objective summary, selecting key textual details.
- Analyze the use of definition strategies in order to apply those strategies to new writing.

Before Reading

1. What does it mean to be an American? What makes an American unique? What characteristics or traits do Americans share? With a partner, review the texts and images you have read in this unit to create a Vocabulary Tree to keep track of the multiple aspects of a definition of an American. As you continue through the first part of the unit, add details and examples to your tree.

During Reading

2. As you read, identify additional details from “What Is an American?” to add to your graphic organizer. These details should support or extend your initial thinking about the definition of an American. Diffuse any unfamiliar words, phrases, or concepts by using context clues, dictionaries, and/or thesauruses to replace unfamiliar words with familiar ones. For instance, asylum means a safe place, so replacing that word helps you better understand the text.
Defining an American

About the Author

J. Hector St. John de Crèvecoeur (1735–1813) published his fictional “Letters from an American Farmer” to provide people in England and Europe a glimpse of life in the American colonies. His affection for Americans is clear as he compares them to Europeans.

Letter

What Is an American?

from Letters from an American Farmer (1781)
by J. Hector St. John de Crèvecoeur

In this great American asylum, the poor of Europe have by some means met together, and in consequence of various causes; to what purpose, should they ask one another, what countrymen they are? Alas, two thirds of them had no country. Can a wretch who wanders about, who works and starves, whose life is a continual scene of sore affliction or pinching penury; can that man call England or any other kingdom his country? A country that had no bread for him, whose fields procured him no harvest, who met with nothing but the frowns of the rich, the severity of the laws, with jails and punishments; who owned not a single foot of the extensive surface of this planet? No! urged by a variety of motives, here they came. Every thing has tended to regenerate them; new laws, a new mode of living, a new social system; here they are become men: in Europe they were as so many useless plants, wanting vegetative mould, and refreshing showers; they withered, and were mowed down by want, hunger, and war: but now, by the power of transplantation, like all other plants, they have taken root and flourished! Formerly they were not numbered in any civil list of their country, except in those of the poor; here they rank as citizens. By what invisible power has this surprising metamorphosis been performed? By that of the laws, and that of their industry. The laws, the indulgent laws, protect them as they arrive, stamping on them the symbol of adoption; they receive ample rewards for their labours; these accumulated rewards procure them lands; those lands confer on them the title of freemen; and to that title every benefit is affixed which men can possibly require. This is the great operation daily performed by our laws. From whence proceed these laws? From our government. Whence that government? It is derived from the original genius and strong desire of the people ratified and confirmed by government. This is the great chain which links us all, this is the picture which every province exhibits, Nova Scotia excepted. There the crown has done all; either there were no people who had genius, or it was not much attended to: the consequence is, that the province is very thinly inhabited indeed; the power of the crown, in conjunction with the musketos, has prevented men from settling there. Yet some part of it flourished once, and it contained a mild harmless set of people. But for the fault of a few leaders the whole were banished. The greatest political error the crown ever committed in America, was to cut off men from a country which wanted nothing but men!

1 penury (n.): poverty
What attachment can a poor European emigrant have for a country where he had nothing? The knowledge of the language, the love of a few kindred as poor as himself, were the only cords that tied him: his country is now that which gives him land, bread, protection, and consequence: Ubi panis ibi patria,² is the motto of all emigrants. What then is the American, this new man? He is either an European, or the descendant of an European; hence that strange mixture of blood, which you will find in no other country. I could point out to you a man, whose grandfather was an Englishman, whose wife was Dutch, whose son married a French woman, and whose present four sons have now four wives of different nations. He is an American, who, leaving behind him all his ancient prejudices and manners, receives new ones from the new mode of life he has embraced, the new government he obeys, and the new rank he holds. He becomes an American by being received in the broad lap of our great Alma Mater.

Here individuals of all nations are melted into a new race of men, whose labours and posterity will one day cause great change in the world. Americans are the western pilgrims, who are carrying along with them that great mass of arts, sciences, vigour, and industry, which began long since in the East; they will finish the great circle. The Americans were once scattered all over Europe; here they are incorporated into one of the finest systems of population which has ever appeared, and which will hereafter become distinct by the power of the different climates they inhabit. The American ought, therefore, to love this country much better than that wherein either he or his forefathers were born. Here the rewards of his industry follow with equal steps the progress of his labour; his labour is founded on the basis of nature, self-interest; can it want a stronger allurement? Wives and children, who before in vain demanded of him a morsel of bread, now, fat and frolicsome, gladly help their father to clear those fields whence exuberant crops are to arise to feed and to clothe them all; without any part being claimed, either by a despotic prince, a rich abbot, or a mighty lord. Here religion demands but little of him; a small voluntary salary to the minister, and gratitude to God; can he refuse these? The American is a new man, who acts upon new principles; he must therefore entertain new ideas, and form new opinions. From involuntary idleness, servile dependence, penury, and useless labour, he has passed to toils of a very different nature, rewarded by ample subsistence. This is an American.

After Reading

3. Create a graphic organizer to compare the new American to Europeans according to de Crèvecoeur.

² Where there is bread there is my country
Definition by Classification
4. In addition to exemplification, another definition strategy is to define by classification by explaining to what group(s) something belongs. With your partner find examples of defining by classification in de Crèvecoeur’s essay. Explain how each adds to your understanding of his definition of an American. Classification examples of an American should answer the question: What groups belong to America or have access to being an American?

Definition by Function
5. Another definition strategy is to define by function by showing what something does or how it operates in the world. With your partner, find examples of defining by function in de Crèvecoeur’s essay and explain how each adds to your understanding of his definition of an American. Function examples of an American should answer the question: What does an American do?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Classification</th>
<th>Function</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Language and Writer’s Craft: Using Direct Quotes

Writers use direct quotations in a summary to highlight key ideas and details from the original source. Using direct quotations adds credibility and validity to the summary. Quotations must always be accompanied by original commentary to explain the meaning and significance of the quote.

Example: According to de Crèvecoeur, “The American ought, therefore, to love this country much better than that wherein either he or his forefathers were born.” America deserves this love because it has given the new American sustenance and freedom.

Use quotation marks to enclose direct quotations, with commas and periods placed inside the closing quotation mark; colons and semicolons are placed outside.

Check Your Understanding

Writing Prompt: Review your initial thinking about the definition of an American and the annotations you made in the margins of the letter. Write an objective summary of de Crèvecoeur’s definition of an American using details from the text to support your thinking. Be sure to:

- Include an introduction of the text you are summarizing.
- Focus on the main argument and key details of the text.
- Include at least one quote, paraphrased or quoted with original commentary.
A Hyphenated American

Learning Targets
- Support the analysis of a text with appropriate evidence.
- Paraphrase a text, expressing the writer’s ideas with new language.
- Analyze and evaluate the effectiveness of the structure of an expository text.

Before Reading
1. Because of the melting pot that is America, many Americans can trace their heritage to a variety of countries and ethnicities. The hyphenated American can be Asian-American, African-American, Indian-American, Mexican-American, and so on. How do you define yourself?

During Reading
2. As you read the following essay, mark the text for phrases and details the author uses to define the “two sides of my face and past.”

ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Kesaya Noda (b. 1950) grew up in New Hampshire. As the grandchild of Japanese immigrants, she experienced the culture of the United States as well as the Japanese culture of her grandparents. In her essay, she talks about how both cultures have influenced her character.

Essay

Growing Up Asian in America

by Kesaya E. Noda

1 Sometimes when I was growing up, my identity seemed to hurtle toward me and paste itself right to my face. I felt that way, encountering the stereotypes of my race perpetuated by non-Japanese people (primarily white) who may or may not have had contact with other Japanese in America. “You don’t like cheese, do you?” someone would ask. “I know your people don’t like cheese.” Sometimes questions came making allusions to history. That was another aspect of the identity. Events that had happened quite apart from the me who stood silent in that moment connected my face with an incomprehensible past. “Your parents were in California? Were they in those camps during the war?” And sometimes there were phrases or nicknames: “Lotus Blossom.” I was sometimes addressed or referred to as racially Japanese, sometimes as Japanese-American, and sometimes as an Asian woman. Confusions and distortions abounded.

2 How is one to know and define oneself? From the inside—within a context that is self-defined, from a grounding in a community and a connection with culture and history that are comfortably accepted? Or from the outside—in terms of messages received from the media and people who are often ignorant? Even as an adult I can still see two sides of my face and past. I can see from the inside out, in freedom. And I can see from the outside in, driven by the old voices of childhood and lost in anger and fear.

GRAMMAR & USAGE
Hyphen
Writers use a hyphen to join two or more words into a single adjective or concept. Hyphens allow writers to add depth to a word by combining the meanings of two or more words to create a new word, which is a compound adjective. For example, Japanese-American, anti-Asian, third-generation.
I AM RACIALLY JAPANESE

3 A voice from my childhood says: “You are other. You are less than. You are unalterably alien.” This voice has its own history. We have indeed been seen as other and alien since the early years of our arrival in the United States. The very first immigrants were welcomed and sought as laborers to replace the dwindling numbers of Chinese, whose influx had been cut off by the Chinese Exclusion Act of 1882. The Japanese fell natural heir to the same anti-Asian prejudice that had arisen against the Chinese. As soon as they began striking for better wages, they were no longer welcomed.

4 I can see myself today as a person historically defined by law and custom as being forever alien. Being neither “free white,” nor “African,” our people in California were deemed “aliens, ineligible for citizenship,” no matter how long they intended to stay here. Aliens ineligible for citizenship were prohibited from owning, buying, or leasing land. They did not and could not belong here. The voice in me remembers that I am always a Japanese-American in the eyes of many. A third-generation German-American is an American. A third-generation Japanese-American is a Japanese-American. Being Japanese means being a danger to the country during the war and knowing how to use chopsticks. I wear this history on my face.

5 I move to the other side. I see a different light and claim a different context. My race is a line that stretches across ocean and time to link me to the shrine where my grandmother was raised. Two high, white banners lie in the wind at the top of the stone steps leading to the shrine. It is time for the summer festival. Black characters are written against the sky as boldly as the clouds, as lightly as kites, as sharply as the big black crows I used to see above the fields in New Hampshire. At festival time there is liquor and food, ritual, discipline, and abandonment. There is music and drunkenness and invocation. There is hope. Another season has come. Another season has gone.

6 I am racially Japanese. I have a certain claim to this crazy place where the prayers intoned by a neighboring Shinto priest (standing in for my grandmother’s nephew who is sick) are drowned out by the rehearsals for the pop singing contest in which most of the villagers will compete later that night. The village elders, the priest, and I stand respectfully upon the immaculate, shining wooden floor of the outer shrine, bowing our heads before the hidden powers. During the patchy intervals when I can hear him, I notice the priest has a stutter. His voice flutters up to my ears only occasionally because two men and a woman are singing gustily into a microphone in the compound, testing the sound system. A pre-recorded tape of guitars, samisens, and drums accompanies them. Rock music and Shinto prayers. That night, to loud applause and cheers, a young man is given the award for the most netsuretsu—passionate, burning—rendition of a song. We roar our approval of the reward. Never mind that his voice had wandered and slid, now slightly above, now slightly below the given line of the melody. Netsuretsu.

7 In the morning, my grandmother’s sister kneels at the foot of the stone stairs to offer her morning prayers. She is too crippled to climb the stairs, so each morning she kneels here upon the path. She shuts her eyes for a few seconds, her motions as matter of fact as when she washes rice. I linger longer than she does, so reluctant to leave, savoring the connection I feel with my grandmother in America, the past, and the power that lives and shines in the morning sun.
Our family has served this shrine for generations. The family's need to protect this claim to identity and place outweighs any individual claim to any individual hope. I am Japanese.

I AM A JAPANESE-AMERICAN

“Weak,” I hear the voice from my childhood years. “Passive,” I hear. Our parents and grandparents were the ones who were put into those camps. They went without resistance; they offered cooperation as proof of loyalty to America. “Victim,” I hear. And, “Silent.”

Our parents are painted as hard workers who were socially uncomfortable and had difficulty expressing even the smallest opinion. Clean, quiet, motivated, and determined to match the American way; that is us, and that is the story of our time here.

“Why did you go into those camps,” I raged at my parents, frightened by my own inner silence and timidity. “Why didn't you do anything to resist? Why didn't you name it the injustice it was?” Couldn't our parents even think? Couldn't they? Why were we so passive?

I shift my vision and my stance. I am in California. My uncle is in the midst of the sweet potato harvest. He is pressed, trying to get the harvesting crews onto the field as quickly as possible, worried about the flow of equipment and people. His big pickup is pulled off to the side, motor running, door ajar. I see two tractors in the yard in front of an old shed; the flat bed harvesting platform on which the workers will stand has already been brought over from the other field. It’s early morning. The workers stand loosely grouped and at ease, but my uncle looks as harried and tense as a police officer trying to unsnarl a New York City traffic jam. Driving toward the shed, I pull my car off the road to make way for an approaching tractor. The front wheels of the car sink luxuriously into the soft, white sand by the roadside and the car slides to a dreamy halt, tail still on the road. I try to move forward. I try to move back. The front bites contentedly into the sand, the back lifts itself at a jaunty angle. My uncle sees me and storms down the road, running. He is shouting before he is even near me.

“What the matter with you,” he screams. “What the hell are you doing?” In his frenzy, he grabs his hat off his head and slashes it through the air across his knee. He is beside himself. “You've blocked the whole roadway. How am I supposed to get my tractors out of here? Can't you use your head? You've cut off the whole roadway, and we've got to get out of here.”

I stand on the road before him helplessly thinking, “No, I don't know how to drive in sand. I've never driven in sand.”

“I'm sorry, uncle,” I say, burying a smile beneath a look of sincere apology. I notice my deep amusement and my affection for him with great curiosity. I am usually devastated by anger. Not this time.

During the several years that follow I learn about the people and the place, and much more about what has happened in this California village where my parents grew up. The issei, our grandparents, made this settlement in the desert. Their first crops were eaten by rabbits and ravaged by insects. The land was so barren that men walking from house to house sometimes got lost. Women came here too. They bore children in 114 degree heat, then carried the babies with them into the fields to nurse when they reached the end of each row of grapes or other truck farm crops.
17 I had had no idea what it meant to buy this kind of land and make it grow green. Or how, when the war came, there was no space at all for the subtlety of being who we were—Japanese-Americans. Either/or was the way. I hadn't understood that people were literally afraid for their lives then, that their money had been frozen in banks; that there was a five-mile travel limit; that when the early evening curfew came and they were inside their houses, some of them watched helplessly as people they knew went into their barns to steal their belongings. The police were patrolling the road, interested only in violators of curfew. There was no help for them in the face of thievery. I had not been able to imagine before what it must have felt like to be an American—to know absolutely that one is an American—and yet to have almost everyone else deny it. Not only deny it, but challenge that identity with machine guns and troops of white American soldiers. In those circumstances it was difficult to say, “I’m a Japanese-American.” “American” had to do.

18 But now I can say that I am a Japanese-American. It means I have a place here in this country, too. I have a place here on the East Coast, where our neighbor is so much a part of our family that my mother never passes her house at night without glancing at the lights to see if she is home and safe; where my parents have hauled hundreds of pounds of rocks from fields and arduously planted Christmas trees and blueberries, lilacs, asparagus, and crab apples; where my father still dreams of angling a stream to a new bed so that he can dig a pond in the field and fill it with water and fish. “The neighbors already came for their Christmas tree?” he asks in December. “Did they like it? Did they like it?”

19 I have a place on the West Coast where my relatives still farm, where I heard the stories of feuds and backbiting, and where I saw that people survived and flourished because fundamentally they trusted and relied upon one another. A death in the family is not just a death in a family; it is a death in the community. I saw people help each other with money, materials, labor, attention, and time. I saw men gather once a year, without fail, to clean the grounds of a ninety-year-old woman who had helped the community before, during, and after the war. I saw her remembering them with birthday cards sent to each of their children.

20 I come from a people with a long memory and a distinctive grace. We live our thanks. And we are Americans. Japanese-Americans...

After Reading

3. Notice that this essay has three major parts. Explain the structure the writer uses to present the three central ideas she uses as she seeks to define herself.
Language and Writer’s Craft: Quoting Original Sources

There are three ways to use someone else’s words in your own writing: summarizing, paraphrasing, and quotations.

- Summarizing: restating the main idea and details in one’s own words
- Paraphrasing: briefly restating ideas from another source in one’s own words
- Using Quotations: using the exact words of another in your writing

Quotation: “I had not been able to imagine before what it must have felt like to be an American—to know absolutely that one is an American—and yet to have almost everyone else deny it. Not only deny it, but challenge that identity with machine guns and troops of white American soldiers.”

Paraphrased Example: The writer begins to understand the pain of knowing yourself as entirely American while others deny you as an American and actually challenge your sense of identity, simply because you are different looking.

Check Your Understanding

Writing Prompt: Consider the structure of Noda’s essay. Write an explanation of how the ending is an effective way to bring closure to her ideas. Be sure to:

- Explain how the structure fits the content of the essay.
- Include a quote from the essay.
- Use paraphrasing to show your understanding of a complex idea.
- Use original commentary to explain the significance of quoted and/or paraphrased passages.
Learning Targets

• Analyze the use of imagery in a poem to see how it refers to the experience of being an American.

• Explain how a particular iconic American image has historical significance.

Before Reading

1. Poets and writers will often use imagery that evokes specific times, places or events in history to create a specific feeling or reaction. Photographers also look for images that evoke specific emotional reactions from their audience.

During Reading

2. Highlight places where Hughes uses imagery to evoke American history.

Poetry

Let America Be America Again

by Langston Hughes

Let America be America again.
Let it be the dream it used to be.
Let it be the pioneer on the plain
Seeking a home where he himself is free.

(America never was America to me.)

Let America be the dream the dreamers dreamed—
Let it be that great strong land of love
Where never kings connive nor tyrants scheme
That any man be crushed by one above.

(It never was America to me.)

O, let my land be a land where Liberty
Is crowned with no false patriotic wreath,
But opportunity is real, and life is free,
Equality is in the air we breathe.

(There's never been equality for me,
Nor freedom in this "homeland of the free.")

Say, who are you that mumbles in the dark?
And who are you that draws your veil across the stars?
I am the poor white, fooled and pushed apart,

20 I am the Negro bearing slavery’s scars.
I am the red man driven from the land,
I am the immigrant clutching the hope I seek—
And finding only the same old stupid plan
Of dog eat dog, of mighty crush the weak.

25 I am the young man, full of strength and hope,
Tangled in that ancient endless chain
Of profit, power, gain, of grab the land!
Of grab the gold! Of grab the ways of satisfying need!
Of work the men! Of take the pay!

30 Of owning everything for one’s own greed!
I am the farmer, bondsman\(^1\) to the soil.
I am the worker sold to the machine.
I am the Negro, servant to you all.
I am the people, humble, hungry, mean—

35 Hungry yet today despite the dream.
Beaten yet today—O, Pioneers!
I am the man who never got ahead,
The poorest worker bartered through the years.
Yet I’m the one who dreamt our basic dream

40 In the Old World while still a serf of kings,
Who dreamt a dream so strong, so brave, so true,
That even yet its mighty daring sings
In every brick and stone, in every furrow turned That’s made America the land it has become.

45 O, I’m the man who sailed those early seas
In search of what I meant to be my home—
For I’m the one who left dark Ireland’s shore,
And Poland’s plain, and England’s grassy lea,
And torn from Black Africa’s strand I came

50 To build a “homeland of the free.”
The free?
Who said the free? Not me?
Surely not me? The millions on relief today?

\(^1\) bondsman (n.): serf or slave
The millions shot down when we strike?

55 The millions who have nothing for our pay?
For all the dreams we’ve dreamed
And all the songs we’ve sung
And all the hopes we’ve held
And all the flags we’ve hung,

60 The millions who have nothing for our pay—
Except the dream that’s almost dead today.

O, let America be America again—
The land that never has been yet—
And yet must be—the land where every man is free.

65 The land that’s mine—the poor man’s, Indian’s, Negro’s, ME—
Who made America,
Whose sweat and blood, whose faith and pain,
Whose hand at the foundry, whose plow in the rain,
Must bring back our mighty dream again.

70 Sure, call me any ugly name you choose—
The steel of freedom does not stain.
From those who live like leeches on the people’s lives,
We must take back our land again,
America!

75 O, yes,
I say it plain,
America never was America to me,
And yet I swear this oath—
America will be!

80 Out of the rack and ruin of our gangster death,
The rape and rot of graft, and stealth, and lies,
We, the people, must redeem²
The land, the mines, the plants, the rivers.
The mountains and the endless plain—

85 All, all the stretch of these great green states—
And make America again!

² redeem (v.): release, liberate, rescue, save
Researching Images of America

After Reading
3. What was the most powerful image to you as a reader? What made it powerful to you? What point was Hughes trying to make by using the image?

Researching an Iconic Image
Some images have become a part of the story of the United States of America. Photographs from an event or of a person often capture some of the essence of what it is to be an American. What makes some images more iconic than the rest is the impact they have on the person viewing the image. There is a point at which an image has a strong enough impact that it becomes a part of our national story and collective memory.

Robert Hariman and John Louis Lucaites define the term iconic image in their article, Performing Civic Identity: the Iconic Photograph of the Flag Raising on Iwo Jima: “Iconic photographs are widely recognized as representations of significant historical events, activate strong emotional response, and are reproduced across a range of media, genres, or topics.”

4. Explain the strong emotional response that this image activates. What makes it an iconic American image?

5. Revisit your vocabulary word tree and add details to your working definition of what it means to be an American.
Research Review

Review your familiarity with primary and secondary sources. For the essay you will write for Embedded Assessment 1, explaining your definition is central; the sources should support your explanation.

Primary sources are original documents containing firsthand information about a subject; e.g., letters or diaries. A secondary source is a discussion or commentary about primary sources, offering an interpretation about information gathered from a primary source; e.g., history books or encyclopedias.

To help ensure that you use substantial, accurate, and timely sources to support your position, it is important to consider each source’s validity, reliability, and relevancy.

Validity: Does the information appear to be accurate and well documented? Is there a bibliography or list of sources? Does the information appear to be free from bias, or does it present only a single position?

Reliability: Are the author’s name and qualifications clearly identified? Is the information from a respected institution (e.g., a university)? If it is an online resource, is the site listed as .gov, .edu, or .org rather than .com?

Relevant: Is the information closely related to your topic? Does it offer support with facts or other information you can quote to support your position?

Researching Iconic American Images

Research and find your own idea of an iconic American image. This image does not need to be one that has been reproduced across a range of media, but it should represent a significant historical event and elicit a strong emotional response. You will submit an image for your classroom’s Gallery of America and provide an explanation of your choice to share with your fellow students.

6. As you think about what iconic American image you will add to the classroom gallery, revisit your vocabulary word tree and the images you highlighted in the previous poem. With a partner, brainstorm a list of significant events that you can remember from history, news, or life.

As you research your iconic American image, keep in mind the three elements of significant images:

- The image is widely recognized as representative of a significant historical event.
- The image evokes strong emotional response.
- The image has been reproduced across a range of media, genres, or topics.
Selecting a Topic
7. Select one or two items on your list and expand your thinking with some notes on what you already know about the topic. Questions to consider as you think about your topics: How is this topic historically relevant for most Americans? What key words are associated with this topic?
Select one topic as the subject of your gallery submission and begin your research.

Researching Your Image
8. There are pictures everywhere on the Internet, in print media, and in history books. Where will you find the most useful information? Use the ideas and the key words that you generated to guide your review of reliable sources. Print a copy of your iconic image and create a plaque with a description, title, and photographic credit.
Your image:

When it was created:

Why it is iconic:

Presenting Your Image
After your and your classmates’ images and descriptions have all been added to the Gallery of America, prepare a brief presentation of your image for your peers. This presentation should introduce the image, provide some background knowledge, and explain the significance of the image.
In pairs, go through the exhibit listening to each presenter’s brief explanation of his or her iconic image. After you have seen and heard all of the presentations, add additional thoughts and details to your vocabulary tree for defining the term “American.” Review the presentations that you have seen, and select the two images you would add to the permanent exhibit of iconic American images. Write your choices and the reasons for your selection on a feedback card.

Check Your Understanding
Writing Prompt: Compose an essay explaining the iconic image you researched and why you chose it. Your essay should provide some background information and illustrate or explain how your image is iconic, using the three elements of an iconic image as guidelines for your thinking. Be sure to:
• Introduce your image with a thesis that provides a clear purpose for your explanation.
• Provide background information that demonstrates that this topic is historically significant.
• Cite your sources using the MLA format.
What Is Freedom?

Learning Targets

- Analyze the use of rhetorical features in an argumentative text.
- Compare how a common theme is expressed in different texts.
- Present, clarify, and challenge ideas in order to propel conversations.

Before Reading

1. Explain the difference between a responsibility and a right. Do all people living in the United States have the same responsibilities and the same rights?

During Reading

2. As you read the speech, look specifically for the way the writer defines and refines the meaning of the word freedom.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt delivered this State of the Union speech on January 6, 1941. The speech outlines four key human rights. It acted as a reminder to the nation of the reasons for supporting Great Britain in its fight against Germany. Ultimately, the United States declared war on Germany in December 1941.

Speech

from

The Four Freedoms

by Franklin D. Roosevelt

Chunk 1

As men do not live by bread alone, they do not fight by armaments alone. Those who man our defenses and those behind them who build our defenses must have the stamina and the courage which come from unshakable belief in the manner of life which they are defending. The mighty action that we are calling for cannot be based on a disregard of all the things worth fighting for.

The nation takes great satisfaction and much strength from the things which have been done to make its people conscious of their individual stake in the preservation of democratic life in America. Those things have toughened the fiber of our people, have renewed their faith and strengthened their devotion to the institutions we make ready to protect.

Certainly this is no time for any of us to stop thinking about the social and economic problems which are the root cause of the social revolution which is today a supreme factor in the world. For there is nothing mysterious about the foundations of a healthy and strong democracy.
The basic things expected by our people of their political and economic systems are simple. They are:

- Equality of opportunity for youth and for others.
- Jobs for those who can work.
- Security for those who need it.
- The ending of special privilege for the few.
- The preservation of civil liberties for all.
- The enjoyment—The enjoyment of the fruits of scientific progress in a wider and constantly rising standard of living.

These are the simple, the basic things that must never be lost sight of in the turmoil and unbelievable complexity of our modern world. The inner and abiding strength of our economic and political systems is dependent upon the degree to which they fulfill these expectations.

Many subjects connected with our social economy call for immediate improvement. As examples:

- We should bring more citizens under the coverage of old-age pensions and unemployment insurance.
- We should widen the opportunities for adequate medical care.
- We should plan a better system by which persons deserving or needing gainful employment may obtain it.

I have called for personal sacrifice, and I am assured of the willingness of almost all Americans to respond to that call. A part of the sacrifice means the payment of more money in taxes. In my budget message I will recommend that a greater portion of this great defense program be paid for from taxation than we are paying for today. No person should try, or be allowed to get rich out of the program, and the principle of tax payments in accordance with ability to pay should be constantly before our eyes to guide our legislation.

If the Congress maintains these principles the voters, putting patriotism ahead of pocketbooks, will give you their applause.

In the future days, which we seek to make secure, we look forward to a world founded upon four essential human freedoms.

- The first is freedom of speech and expression—everywhere in the world.
- The second is freedom of every person to worship God in his own way—everywhere in the world.
- The third is freedom from want, which, translated into world terms, means economic understandings which will secure to every nation a healthy peacetime life for its inhabitants—everywhere in the world.
- The fourth is freedom from fear, which, translated into world terms, means a world-wide reduction of armaments to such a point and in such a thorough fashion that no nation will be in a position to commit an act of physical aggression against any neighbor—anywhere in the world.

That is no vision of a distant millennium. It is a definite basis for a kind of world attainable in our own time and generation. That kind of world is the very antithesis of the so-called “new order” of tyranny which the dictators seek to create with the crash of a bomb.
To that new order we oppose the greater conception—the moral order. A good society is able to face schemes of world domination and foreign revolutions alike without fear.

Since the beginning of our American history we have been engaged in change, in a perpetual, peaceful revolution, a revolution which goes on steadily, quietly, adjusting itself to changing conditions without the concentration camp or the quicklime in the ditch. The world order which we seek is the cooperation of free countries, working together in a friendly, civilized society.

This nation has placed its destiny in the hands and heads and hearts of its millions of free men and women, and its faith in freedom under the guidance of God. Freedom means the supremacy of human rights everywhere. Our support goes to those who struggle to gain those rights and keep them. Our strength is our unity of purpose.

To that high concept there can be no end save victory.

After Reading

3. Use the graphic organizer to track the four freedoms outlined in Roosevelt’s speech, then read the Bill of Rights and make connections between the two sets of freedoms. Add your notes about those amendments. Once you have completed this graphic organizer, revisit your vocabulary word tree and add details to your working definition of what it means to be an American.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Four Freedoms</th>
<th>Notes from the Bill of Rights</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Freedom Defined by the U. S. Constitution

The document that forms the basis for most of our rights as Americans is the Constitution. Since its ratification, it has been amended 27 times. The first 10 amendments are known as the Bill of Rights. Beginning on the next page, read the Preamble to the Constitution and then Amendments I through X.
The Preamble to the Constitution of the United States

We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

The Bill of Rights: A Transcription

Note: The following text is a transcription of the first ten amendments to the Constitution in their original form. These amendments were ratified December 15, 1791, and form what is known as the “Bill of Rights.”

Amendment I

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Amendment II

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

Amendment III

No Soldier shall, in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the Owner, nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

Amendment IV

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Amendment V

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

What Is Freedom?

ACTIVITY 1.9 continued

KEY IDEAS AND DETAILS
Find the specific part of the Preamble that deals with freedom. Explain how it fits with the purpose of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights.

KEY IDEAS AND DETAILS
What is the relationship between a freedom and a right as used by Roosevelt and the framers of the Constitution? Which of the four freedoms is not mentioned in the Bill of Rights?
Amendment VI
In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the Assistance of Counsel for his defence.

Amendment VII
In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

Amendment VIII
Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

Amendment IX
The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

Amendment X
The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

After Reading
4. How are rights also freedoms?
5. Complete the graphic organizer on page 45 to compare the freedoms defined by Roosevelt and those in the Bill of Rights. What is the common theme between these documents? Compare how this theme is treated in the two texts. Use relevant details from each text to support your comparison of the common thematic concept.

Socratic Seminar
To prepare for the Socratic Seminar, review the readings in this activity and write a response to the following pre-seminar questions. Use details from each text to support your thinking.
Pre-seminar questions:
• Why is freedom so important to Americans?
• Which of the freedoms mentioned in the text is the most important? Explain.
• To what extent are we as individuals responsible to ensure that all Americans have their rights and freedoms?

A successful seminar depends on the participants and their willingness to engage in the conversation. The following are things to keep in mind as you participate in a Socratic Seminar:
• Talk to the participants and not the teacher or seminar leader.
• Refer to the texts to support your thinking or to challenge an idea.
• Paraphrase what another student has said to make sure that you understand the point before challenging the opinion.
Before Reading
1. Complex ideas or concepts often need defining beyond what can be found in the dictionary. The extended definition provides a variety of ways to think about the idea or concept. Freedom and democracy are just such complex concepts. Can you think of others?

During Reading
2. As you read the following definition, highlight or underline the details used to define the concept of freedom.

ABSTRACT THE AUTHORS
Jerald M. Jellison, professor of psychology at the University of Southern California, specializes in theories of human social behavior. John H. Harvey, professor of social psychology at Vanderbilt University, recently co-edited a collection of studies in social behavior.

Definition Essay
WHAT IS Freedom?

by Jerald M. Jellison and John H. Harvey

The pipe under your kitchen sink springs a leak and you call in a plumber. A few days later you get a bill for $40. At the bottom is a note saying that if you don't pay within 30 days, there'll be a 10 percent service charge of $4. You feel trapped, with no desirable alternative. You pay $40 now or $44 later.

Now make two small changes in the script. The plumber sends you a bill for $44, but the note says that if you pay within 30 days you'll get a special $4 discount. Now you feel pretty good. You have two alternatives, one of which will save you $4.

In fact, your choices are the same in both cases—pay $40 now or $44 later—but your feelings about them are different. This illustrates a subject we've been studying for several years: What makes people feel free and why does feeling free make them happy? One factor we've studied is that individuals feel freer when they can choose between positive alternatives (delaying payment or saving $4) rather than between negative ones (paying immediately or paying $4 more).
Choosing between negative alternatives often seems like no choice at all. Take the case of a woman trying to decide whether to stay married to her inconsiderate, incompetent husband, or get a divorce. She doesn’t want to stay with him but she feels divorce is a sign of failure and will stigmatize her socially. Or think of the decision faced by many young men a few years ago, when they were forced to choose between leaving their country and family or being sent to Vietnam.

When we face decisions involving only alternatives we see as negatives, we feel so little freedom that we twist and turn searching for another choice with some positive characteristics.

Freedom is a popular word. Individuals talk about how they feel free with one person and not with another, or how their bosses encourage or discourage freedom on the job. We hear about civil wars and revolutions being fought for greater freedom, with both sides righteously making the claim. The feeling of freedom is so important that people say they’re ready to die for it, and supposedly have.

Still, most people have trouble coming up with a precise definition of freedom. They give answers describing specific situations—“Freedom means doing what I want to do, not what the Government wants me to do,” or “Freedom means not having my mother tell me when to come home from a party”—rather than a general definition covering many situations. The idea they seem to be expressing is that freedom is associated with making decisions, and that other people sometimes limit the number of alternatives from which they can select.

After Reading
3. Write a short summary of these authors’ definitions of freedom.

The Definition Strategy of Negation
4. The last definition strategy is negation. To define by negation means explaining what something is by showing what it is not. Using negation helps to contrast your definition with others’ definitions. With your partner, find an example of defining by negation in Jellison and Harvey’s extended definition and explain how negation adds to your understanding of their definition of freedom. Examples of negation should answer the question: What is freedom not?

5. How would you define the concept of freedom? Brainstorm examples for each of the definition strategies—exemplification, classification, function, and negation—that prove or support your definition of “freedom.” Use the graphic organizer on the next page to record your responses.
The Definition of Freedom

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Negation: (What is freedom not?)</th>
<th>Function: (What does freedom do?)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Example: (What are some examples of freedom?)

Classification: (What are types of freedom?)

Language and Writer’s Craft: Transitions

Transitions are important when writing extended definitions. In the definition of freedom, the authors of the previous text use transitional words and phrases within and between paragraphs.

- Transitional words that can be used to prove include the following: because, since, for the same reason, obviously, evidently, furthermore, besides, indeed, in fact, in any case.

  Example: “In fact, your choices are the same in both cases—pay $40 now or $44 later—but your feelings about them are different.”

- Words used to give examples include: for example, for instance, in this case, on this occasion, in this situation, to demonstrate, take the case of, as an illustration, to illustrate this point, take the case of.

  Example: “Take the case of a woman trying to decide whether to stay married to her inconsiderate, incompetent husband, or get a divorce.”

Check Your Understanding

As a group, write a definition for the word “freedom.” Have each member of your group write a paragraph defining freedom using a different definition strategy. Then, combine the ideas in all the paragraphs into one definition of freedom. Be sure to use effective transitions in your definition.
Writing a Definition Essay

Assignment
Your assignment is to write a multi-paragraph essay that defines your interpretation of what it means to be an American. This essay should use the strategies of definition and different perspectives from the unit to help you develop a complex and thoughtful definition. If possible, incorporate an iconic image into your essay.

Planning and Prewriting
- What prewriting strategy will help you define what it means to be an American (free writing, webbing, graphic organizer)?
- What pieces of writing from this unit connected strongly with you? How can they help to add depth and dimension to your definition?
- How can you share your ideas with a peer to help you select the strongest material to include in your draft?

Drafting
- How will you take the complex elements of your definition and work them into a clear, focused thesis statement?
- How can you sequence your ideas so that they work together to build a clear and convincing definition?
- What strategies of definition work well with your selected evidence and ideas?

Evaluating and Revising
- Does your essay have coherence—does it present ideas that tie together and flow smoothly, making the essay easy to follow for the reader?
- Does your essay have specific, varied diction and a variety of sentence patterns?
- Where can you add or revise transitions so that one idea smoothly leads to another?
- How can you use the Scoring Guide as a tool to evaluate your draft or to seek out feedback from others?

Editing and Publishing
- How will you check your writing for grammatical and technical accuracy?
- What sort of outside resources can help you to check your draft (e.g. a format guide, a dictionary, etc.)?
- What is an effective way to use a final read-through of your essay to make final adjustments (e.g., read it out loud or have a peer read it to you)?

Reflection
After completing this Embedded Assessment, think about how you went about accomplishing this assignment, and respond to the following:
- In what ways did the process of defining what it means to be an American cause you to rethink or reevaluate your own ideas?
- Did the material that you read in this unit have a role in this? Why or why not?
SCORING GUIDE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Scoring Criteria</th>
<th>Exemplary</th>
<th>Proficient</th>
<th>Emerging</th>
<th>Incomplete</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ideas</td>
<td>The essay • asserts a focused, clearly stated thesis • develops and supports the thesis thoroughly with relevant, significant, and substantial facts and quotations • synthesizes information on multiple, relevant perspectives.</td>
<td>The essay • asserts a clear thesis • develops and supports the thesis with relevant facts and quotations • incorporates information on various perspectives.</td>
<td>The essay • presents an unfocused or limited thesis • attempts to develop and support the thesis with weak evidence that may not be appropriate • inconsistently incorporates information on various perspectives.</td>
<td>The essay • asserts a weak thesis • contains facts, quotations, or other information that may not develop or support the topic • contains insufficient information on various perspectives.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Structure</td>
<td>The essay • organizes complex ideas so that new elements build to create a unified whole • creates an effective and engaging introduction and conclusion that articulate the implications or significance of the topic • uses a variety of definition strategies with skill and purpose • uses a variety of meaningful transitions.</td>
<td>The essay • organizes ideas so that each new element builds on that which preceded it to create cohesion • presents a clear and focused introduction and conclusion • uses a variety of definition strategies effectively • uses transitions to connect the larger ideas of the essay.</td>
<td>The essay • demonstrates limited cohesion with inconsistent connections among the elements • contains an underdeveloped or unfocused introduction and/or conclusion • attempts to use definition strategies with limited success • inconsistently uses transitions to connect ideas.</td>
<td>The essay • demonstrates limited cohesion; expected elements may be missing • lacks an introduction and/or conclusion • uses few or no definition strategies • presents limited use of transitions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Use of Language</td>
<td>The essay • uses precise diction and a variety of sentence types and structures deliberately chosen to enhance the reader’s understanding of a complex topic • demonstrates superior command of conventions of standard English.</td>
<td>The essay • uses diction and a variety of sentence types or structures that appropriately manages the topic • demonstrates a command of conventions so that minor errors do not interfere with meaning.</td>
<td>The essay • uses diction that is inconsistent and provides little variety in sentence structure • attempts to follow conventions, but errors in usage may cause some confusion.</td>
<td>The essay • uses diction that is inappropriate at times; shows little or no variety in sentence structure • contains errors in grammar, punctuation, capitalization, or spelling that interfere with meaning.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Learning Targets
- Reflect on concepts, essential questions, and vocabulary.
- Identify and analyze the knowledge and skills needed to complete Embedded Assessment 2 successfully.
- Compose a reaction statement that takes a specific position.

Making Connections
An important task of every critical thinker is to be able to read and understand the thinking of others. More importantly, as a critical thinker you must be able to gather together many ideas and sort through them to find what you can use and what you can discard in formulating your own thinking. This act of synthesis or combining often entails the creative act of constructing your own definitions of what is important to you. Synthesizing your own thoughts, your reading, and your research will lead to your own personal understanding of a complex idea such as “The American Dream.”

Essential Questions
You have constructed a personal definition of an American. Now write about your understanding of Essential Question 2: What is the American Dream?

Developing Vocabulary
Review the vocabulary from the first part of this unit. Include new words from texts you have read. Which words do you know thoroughly? Which do you need to spend more time learning?

Unpacking Embedded Assessment 2
Closely read the assignment for Embedded Assessment 2: Synthesizing the American Dream.

Your assignment is to synthesize at least three to five sources and your own observations to defend, challenge, or qualify the statement that “America still provides access to The American Dream.” This question requires you to integrate a variety of sources (3–5) into a coherent, well-written argumentative essay. Be sure to refer to the sources and employ your own observations to support your position. Your argument should be central; the sources and your observations should support this argument.

With your class, identify and analyze the knowledge you need (what do you need to know) and the skills you must have (what must you be able to do) to complete the assignment successfully. Create a graphic organizer as you “unpack” the requirements of Embedded Assessment 2.
Survey
As you read each statement below, use a scale from 1—10 and decide to what extent these ideas are prevalent today. If the idea presented in the statement is something you are exposed to on a regular basis, rate it a 10. If you do not see evidence of the statement at all, rate it a 1 (and remember there are plenty of numbers in between).

1. Education is the foundation of a free society.

2. Individuals’ rights are superior to the needs of society.

3. All religious beliefs are protected.

4. Our government was created to guarantee freedoms.

5. Education is important primarily to get a job.

6. Community provides strength and support to individuals.

7. Human beings are basically good and getting better.

8. Individual liberties must always be controlled by government authority.

9. Self-reliance and independence are important to a good life.

10. Science and progress are closely related.

11. The American Dream means making lots of money.

13. Everyone can achieve The American Dream.

14. The American Dream includes freedom from want.

15. Sacrifice is part of achieving success and prosperity.

Quickwrite: Reflect on your rankings. Share your responses with a partner or a small group. You might choose to share your responses with the whole class. After discussing, select one statement that you and your partners think is an important part of the American Dream. Defend your position and explain the rationale for your thinking.

INDEPENDENT READING LINK
To enhance this unit’s focus on multiple perspectives on the American Dream, direct your independent reading toward nonfiction. Memoirs, autobiographies, or biographies of the immigrant experience or growing up in America will help you understand how others define the American Dream.
Learning Targets
• Identify and evaluate an author’s argument, claims, evidence, and call to action.
• Identify aspects of a definition of “The American Dream.”

Before Reading
1. Skim the title and first paragraph of the following article. How would you characterized the way this writer is approaching the material he is about to present? How does he attempt to grab the reader’s attention?

During Reading
2. In the first paragraph of the article, the author begins by defining the American Dream. How does it compare to your definition?
3. As you read the article, underline the author’s main arguments and the evidence the writer uses to support his thinking. Annotate the text in the margins by asking questions to clarify your understanding and by challenging the author’s position or evidence.

Article

Is the American Dream Still Possible?

[from Parade, October 2010]
by David Wallechinsky

To be “middle class” in America once meant living well and having financial security. But today that comfortable and contented lifestyle is harder to achieve and maintain. PARADE commissioned Mark Clements Research Inc. to survey Americans nationwide about their finances and outlook for the future. Contributing Editor David Wallechinsky—author of recent articles on where your tax dollars go and on pork-barrel spending—interprets the results.

The traditional American Dream is based on the belief that hardworking citizens can better their lives, pay their monthly bills without worry, give their children a start to an even better life and still save enough to live comfortably after they retire. But many average Americans are struggling—squeezed by rising costs, declining wages, credit-card debt and diminished benefits, with little left over to save for retirement. (See statistics below.)

Does the dream survive? Do most Americans still believe they can forge better lives for themselves?
PARADE surveyed more than 2,200 Americans, of whom fully 84% described themselves as belonging to the middle class, regardless of where they live (living costs are higher in some regions) or the size of their household.

For this report, we focused on U.S. households earning between $30,000 and $99,000 a year. Most of those surveyed describe themselves as married and having a family. More than 64% say they are employed full-time or part-time. Most say they are in reasonably good health and have a satisfying religious or spiritual life. They own a home and at least two cars, and they are able to take vacations. By international standards, they live a life of prosperity.

Yet behind this prosperity is a growing unease. Half of the employed respondents say that they’ve experienced either increased health-care costs or a cut in health benefits over the last three years, and 39% have had cuts in their overtime, raises or bonuses. Almost two-thirds say they live from paycheck to paycheck, and 47% say that no matter how hard they work, they cannot get ahead. More than a third worry about job loss.

Richard Oden of Conyers, Ga.—married, with five children—worked in the beer industry for 23 years. Last year, he developed pneumonia and required major surgery. When he was unable to return to work by a given date, he says, his company terminated him at age 54—even though he had a perfect attendance record and no performance problems.

To help support his family, Oden had to dip into his 401(k) fund, paying a penalty for premature withdrawal. “This was very stressful,” he says. “Everything had gone up—except wages.”

Oden has since started his own business, a “leadership and personal development” consulting firm. His wife, Josett, works as a representative in the health-care field. “I do believe I will recover financially,” Oden says, “and that I will realize a decent retirement. But the traditional American Dream? For most Americans, it’s still a dream—a pipe dream.”

Having drawn on his own retirement fund, Oden knows that saving can be a big problem. In the survey, nearly 83% say that there is not much left to save after they’ve paid their bills. Statistics from the Commerce Department bear this out: The savings rate for Americans is the lowest it has been in 73 years.

Self-reliance and sacrifice. Most of those interviewed display qualities common to American success stories: determination, flexibility, pragmatism, willingness to work hard and especially self-reliance. Almost three-quarters of the middle-class respondents surveyed say they take responsibility for their own financial destiny and believe that they will succeed or fail based on their own efforts. Still, many are downsizing their dreams.

Shelly Comer, 43, of Dos Palos, Calif., is a divorced mother of three who also takes care of a friend of her oldest child, Michelle. She is going into debt so that Michelle can go to college. Shelly has worked her whole life—as a receptionist, janitor, preschool teacher and activities director at a hospital. Recently, she became a registered nurse and now works the night shift in obstetrics at another hospital. Her annual income is $70,377.
Michelle, 19, is a freshman at the University of California at Merced. She says she is concerned about the financial burden her education is placing on her family: “In order to meet our expected family contribution, my mother had to borrow the entire amount of her share.” For her part, Michelle earned six small scholarships, two of which are renewable for next year, and took out a federal loan. She also works 16 hours a week in the financial-aid office at the university.

Shelly has a retirement plan through the hospital. “But I have nothing saved for me,” she says. “I’m putting it all into the kids, so that they can succeed in school. Our parents did everything for us, and I hope to do the same for my kids. I don’t count on anyone else to help us get to where we want to go. It’s all up to me and my family. And I trust in God to help us.”

Who is responsible? One of the most intriguing results of the Parade survey is that 89% of the middle class believes that businesses have a social responsibility to their employees and to the community. Yet 81% believe that, in fact, American businesses make decisions based on what is best for their shareholders and investors, not what’s best for their employees.

Randy Omark, 55, and Cherie Morris, 58, of Stroudsburg, Pa., husband and wife, are former flight attendants for TWA. Cherie took a buyout in the late 1990s—before American Airlines bought TWA in 2001. After the acquisition, Randy was put on “furlough” (as were about 4,000 other former TWA flight attendants) and never rehired. After 26 years with the two airlines, his pension was frozen and then taken over by the government. Now he gets $324 a month in payments.

Today, despite having a college education, Randy works for $9 an hour finding community jobs for mentally challenged adults. Cherie works for a greeting-card company for $7.25 an hour.

“It used to be that if you stayed with your job, you would be rewarded,” says Cherie. “Now there is no guarantee.” As for retirement, Randy says, “Eventually, we will just downsize everything, sell our house and move into a smaller one.”

Is the dream changing? Simone Luevano, 46, and Miguel Gutierrez, 44, run a garage-door installation and repair business in Albuquerque, N.M. While the business grossed $453,000 last year, they took home just $50,000 net to live on. They have a daughter—Marilyn, age 7—who is deaf in one ear and goes to a private school that costs $3600 a year.

Simone says that financial stress is part of their lives: “It comes from the ‘maybe, could be, should be’ nature of our business.” When the economy is down, people don’t buy a new garage-door system. The cost of gas at the pump is a major factor, she adds: “When the price of gasoline goes down, business goes up.”

Have they prepared for retirement? Simone laughs, then replies, “The words ‘retirement’ and ‘vacation’ are not in our vocabulary. You know that old Tennessee Ernie Ford song: ‘I owe my soul to the company store’? We don’t think about retirement. They’ll have to take me out of here with my high-top tennies on.”
“The American Dream is a bygone thing,” she adds. “It’s not the way life is anymore. I used to believe I was responsible for my own destiny. But it’s not that simple. Now it’s faith and fortitude.”

What Can You Do?

In this (and every) election year, many politicians rev up emotions that keep voters from focusing on the pocketbook and daily-life issues that truly matter. You know what really touches your family and life: The cost of milk, gas and prescription drugs. The quality of schools. The hope that the government will step in fully prepared to keep you safe and secure if a disaster hits your neighborhood.

Don’t leave decision-making and priority-setting to zealots who have an ax to grind—or to the blindly ambitious people who emerge in every generation. For more than 200 years, our system of government has encouraged power to the people. Be an active citizen.

After Reading

4. How does Wallechinsky’s “call to action” show another basic tenet of “the American Dream?”

Language and Writer’s Craft: Transitions

Transition words and phrases are important for argumentative writing. As in other writing, transitions help the reader navigate through the text. Transitions like however, still, despite, and yet can signal that the writer is refuting opposing arguments.

Check Your Understanding

Review your responses to the questions in which you discussed the concept of the American Dream. Imagine presenting your position to David Wallechinsky. Create an imaginary conversation between you and the author discussing the following questions, and record your thinking:

- At the beginning, Wallechinsky summarizes the traditional idea of the American Dream. To what extent do you agree with his definition? What assumptions or beliefs are either spoken or unspoken in the author’s writing?
- To what extent is Wallechinsky’s call to action a reasonable and effective idea in light of the problems he highlights about the promise of the American Dream?
Learning Targets

- Identify the elements of an argument in a text.
- Analyze The Declaration of Independence for its purpose and rhetorical features.
- Evaluate the effectiveness of the elements of argument in a text.

Before Reading

1. One of the most important documents in history, The Declaration of Independence, provides the ideals and beliefs of a fledgling people that became a nation. With a partner, generate a list of what you already know about the Declaration of Independence.

2. You have been introduced to and have applied the structure of an argument to your reading and writing in the past. As a review, go to the graphic organizer following the text of The Declaration of Independence and review the five key elements usually found in a good argument.

During Reading

3. Apply the elements of an effective argument as you analyze the text of The Declaration of Independence.

Historical Document

-The Declaration of Independence-

Chunk 1

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature’s God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.—That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed,—That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a...
GRAMMAR USAGE
Diction and Parallelism

Consider the syntax and choice of words used to describe the actions of the king.

Example: “He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the loves of our people.”

How do these verbs convey the tone of the document?

The Structure of an Argument

history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world.

Chunk 2

1 He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

2 He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

3 He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

4 He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

5 He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people.

6 He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within.

7 He has endeavoured to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands.

8 He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers.

9 He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

10 He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.

11 He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures.

12 He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power.

13 He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended Legislation:

Chunk 3

14 For Quartering large bodies of armed troops among us:

15 For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States:

16 For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world:

17 For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent:
ACTIVITY 113
continued

KEY IDEAS AND DETAILS
Reread Chunk 4 and highlight details that support the idea of unity and commitment.

What insight do these details provide about the importance of unity and the name of our country, the United States of America?

18 For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by Jury:

19 For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences

20 For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies:

21 For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments:

22 For suspending our own Legislatures and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

Chunk 4

23 He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us.

24 He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

25 He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation.

26 He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands.

27 He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions.

28 In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Chunk 5

29 Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends.

30 We, therefore, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and

WORD CONNECTIONS
Archaic Words
The words “hither” and “brethren” are no longer in general usage in American English. What do they mean and what modern words have replaced them? Notice also the spelling variations that represent British English, such as compleat and endeavours. to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our Lives, our Fortunes and our sacred Honor.

After Reading

4. Do you think that the unfamiliar words and phrasing make this text less meaningful? Should the United States consider revising the document with modern language?

5. The Declaration of Independence is an historic example of argumentation. Re-read the text with a partner and note the elements of argumentation with textual evidence from the text.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Key Elements of an Argument</th>
<th>Details from The Declaration of Independence</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Hook: (Gets the reader’s attention)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• The hook grabs the readers’ attention and catches their interest.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• It establishes a connection between the writer and the audience, anticipating audience knowledge and providing needed background information.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• It can be, but is not limited to, an anecdote, an image, a definition, or a quotation.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Claim: (The topic being argued)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Usually comes in the opening section of your paper.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• States your belief and what it is that you wish to argue.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Anticipates the audience’s knowledge, concerns, values, and possible biases and addresses them with evidence.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Concessions and Refutations: (Acknowledges counterclaims fairly and thoroughly, uses evidence to point out strengths and limitations and to refute claims)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• The writer recognizes counterclaims made by the other side.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• This builds credibility by discussing strengths and limitations with fairness and objectivity.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• The writer grants that the other side has some validity, then ...</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• The writer argues at length against the opposing viewpoint by proving that his or her claim has MORE validity.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Support: (Presents facts to convince audience)
- Set out the reasoning behind your argument.
- Provide supporting evidence of your claim (data, quotes, anecdotes, etc.).
- Blend together logical and emotional appeals.

Call to Action: (The final word)
- Draw your argument to a close and restate your claim.
- Make a final new appeal to values.
- Voice a final plea.
- Try not to repeat information, but sum up your argument with a few final facts and appeals.

Check Your Understanding

Writing Prompt: Now that you have examined closely one of the foundational documents of American life and government, what part do the ideas presented in this document, as well as other seminal documents such as the Preamble to the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, play in the creation of the idea of the American Dream and the freedoms we enjoy? Be sure to:
- Include a thesis that answers the question.
- Provide textual evidence from any of the texts mentioned to support your position.
- Use varied sentence beginnings and maintain a formal style with an objective tone.
LEARNING TARGETS
• Analyze the use of diction in two texts in order to explain the impact of a poet’s choices on a reader.
• Analyze how conflicting images point to thematic points.
• Synthesize connections among multiple texts to support a thematic interpretation.

Before Reading
1. The American Dream is often associated with people who are new to our country. Brainstorm about the dreams, hopes, and backgrounds of early immigrant Americans. Share your thoughts in a small group.

During Reading
2. Read the poem “Ellis Island” silently; then read the poem by Phillis Wheatley.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Part Native American, Joseph Bruchac (b. 1942) began telling Native American stories for his own children and published his first book of stories in 1975. An award-winning writer and professional storyteller, Bruchac has since written dozens of books for children and adults that seek to promote and preserve Native stories and culture.

Poetry

Ellis Island
by Joseph Bruchac

Beyond the red brick of Ellis Island where the two Slovak children who became my grandparents waited the long days of quarantine, after leaving the sickness, the old Empires of Europe, a Circle Line ship slips easily on its way to the island of the tall woman, green as dreams of forests and meadows waiting for those who’d worked a thousand years yet never owned their own.
Like millions of others,

I too come to this island, nine decades the answerer of dreams.

Yet only part of my blood loves that memory.
Another voice speaks of native lands within this nation.

Lands invaded
when the earth became owned.
Lands of those who followed the changing Moon, knowledge of the seasons in their veins.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Phillis Wheatley (1753–1784) was kidnapped in West Africa and transported aboard the slave ship Phillis to Boston in 1761. She was purchased by John Wheatley as a servant for his wife. Young Phillis quickly learned to speak English and to read the Bible with amazing fluency. She published her first poem in 1767 and, six years later, published a book, Poems on Various Subjects. That same year, John Wheatley emancipated her. Phillis Wheatley was the first African American, the first slave, and the third woman in the United States to publish a book of poems.

Poetry

On Being Brought from Africa to America

by Phillis Wheatley

’Twas mercy brought me from my Pagan land,
Taught my benighted soul to understand
That there’s a God, that there’s a Saviour too:
Once I redemption neither sought nor knew.
Some view our sable race with scornful eye,
“Th’ir colour is a diabolic die.”
Remember, Christians, Negros, black as Cain,
May be refin’d, and join th’ angelic train.

KEY IDEAS AND DETAILS

What immigrant experience does Wheatley convey, and how would it add to Bruchac’s sense of conflict within the American spirit?
During Reading

3. As you read the poem “Europe and America,” highlight images that contrast the two generations presented in the poem.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

David Ignatow was born in Brooklyn, New York, in 1914 to Russian immigrants. His poetry, which is written in straightforward language, often portrays urban life and the lives of the working poor. Ignatow won many prestigious awards for his poetry before he died in 1997.

Poetry

by David Ignatow

My father brought the emigrant bundle of desperation and worn threads, that in anxiety as he stumbles
umble out distractedly;

while I am bedded upon soft green money that grows like grass.

Thus, between my father who lives on a bed of anguish for his daily bread, and I who tear money at leisure by the roots,

where I lie in sun or shade,

a vast continent of breezes, storms to him, shadows, darkness to him, small lakes, rough channels to him, and hills, mountains to him, lie between us.

My father comes of a small hell where bread and man have been kneaded and baked together.

You have heard the scream as the knife fell;

while I have slept

as guns pounded offshore.

Denotation and Connotation in “Europe and America”

4. Images often have a powerful connotative effect. Identify the denotation and connotation of key images from the poem “Europe and America.” Discuss the effect that those particular words have on the reader. Choose some words or phrases of your own to analyze. Write them in your Reader/Writer Notebook or on a separate piece of paper.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Word or Phrase</th>
<th>Denotation</th>
<th>Connotation</th>
<th>Effect on the Reader</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>emigrant bundle of desperation</td>
<td>emigrant: One who leaves the country of his or her birth</td>
<td>The father is associated with that which is negative, bringing all his hopelessness to the new world.</td>
<td>The words set up the reader to contrast the father’s experience with the son’s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>bundle: A group of objects held together by tying or wrapping</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>desperation: Recklessness arising from losing all hope</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>bedded on soft green money</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>bed of anguish</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>vast continent of breezes, storms to him</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Sentence Synthesis

5. Consider how the effect on the reader might change if you changed any of the key phrases in “Europe and America.” Imagine that instead of “bedded on soft green money,” the poet were to have written “funded by filthy bills.” How does that change the effect of the imagery and the attitude conveyed by the diction? Write your answer in the My Notes space.

Check Your Understanding

Writing Prompt: Consider the three poems you have read and the connections between the speakers and the ideas they present about their experiences. Write an essay in which you explain a common theme between these speakers’ experiences and the reality of the American Dream in their lives. What contradictions do the writers present, and how do the writers resolve the conflicts? Be sure to:

- Include a thesis that connects all three poems.
- Provide textual evidence from the poems to support your thinking.
- Use a variety of sentence beginnings.
Learning Targets
- Examine how a single topic is explored by multiple writers.
- Synthesize the ideas of multiple texts.

Before Reading
1. Quickwrite: Another aspect of the American Dream is money. Americans often equate success with money. How important is money to attaining the American Dream?

2. Read and review the following quotations about money and write a brief explanation of each one in your own words. Think of a visual to go with each one.

   “The love of money is the root of all evil.” (from the Bible)

   “Remember that time is money.” (Benjamin Franklin)

   “Put not your trust in money, but your money in trust.” (Oliver Wendell Holmes)

   “A good reputation is more valuable than money.” (Publius Syrus)

   “If money be not thy servant, it will be thy master.” (Sir Francis Bacon)

   “The safest way to double your money is to fold it over twice and put it in your pocket.” (Frank McKinney Hubbard)

   “Those who believe money can do everything are frequently prepared to do everything for money.” (George Savile)

   “There’s no money in poetry, but then there’s no poetry in money, either.” (Robert Graves)

   “Money cannot buy happiness.” (Anonymous)

   “A fool and his money are soon parted.” (Benjamin Franklin)

   “A penny saved is a penny earned.” (Benjamin Franklin)
During Reading

3. As you read the poem, look for examples of personification and synecdoche. An example of synecdoche is “all hands on deck” to mean sailors (part to whole) or “America will win the America's Cup this year” (whole to part).

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

After fifteen years in a business career, Dana Gioia became a full-time writer in 1992. He is a literary and music critic, poet, and radio commentator who has also served as the Chairman for the National Endowment of the Arts. His essay “Can Poetry Matter?” is considered one of the most influential literary criticisms in the last quarter century.

Poetry

by Dana Gioia

Money, the long green, cash, stash, rhino, jack or just plain dough.

Chock it up, fork it over, shell it out. Watch it burn holes through pockets.
To be made of it! To have it to burn! Greenbacks, double eagles, megabucks and Ginnie Maes.

It greases the palm, feathers a nest, holds heads above water,
makes both ends meet.

Money breeds money.
Gathering interest, compounding daily.

Always in circulation.

Money. You don’t know where it’s been, but you put it where your mouth is.
And it talks.
Money and the American Dream

After Reading
4. Connect the quotes to the poem. Which quotes fit with the tone and the meaning of the poem “Money”? Explain.

Before Reading
5. A Raisin in the Sun is a play about an African American family that is set in Chicago sometime between World War II and 1959, when the play was first produced. The family is about to receive a large amount of money after the death of the father. Walter, the son, wants to invest the money in a liquor store but his mother objects.

During Reading
6. As you read the excerpt of the play, pay attention to the conflicting attitudes toward the role of money in this family and what money means to the main characters. Highlight the lines that show the character’s opinions about money.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Lorraine Hansberry grew up in Chicago in an educated, successful, and activist family. Her father moved the family into a white neighborhood to challenge discriminatory housing practices. Her play, a huge literary and commercial success, was developed out of that experience.

Drama
From A Raisin in the Sun

by Lorraine Hansberry

Characters:
Walter and Ruth Younger (husband and wife)
Lena Younger (Mama—Walter’s mother)

MAMA: What was they fighting about?
RUTH: Now you know as well as I do.
MAMA (shaking her head): Brother still worrying hisself sick about that money?
RUTH: You know he is.
MAMA: You had breakfast?
RUTH: Some coffee.
MAMA: Girl, you better start eating and looking after yourself better. You almost thin as Travis.
RUTH: Lena—
MAMA: Un-hunh?
RUTH: What are you going to do with it?
MAMA: Now don’t you start, child. It’s too early in the morning to be talking about money. It ain’t Christian.
RUTH: It’s just that he got his heart set on that store—
MAMA: You mean that liquor store that Willy Harris want him to invest in?
RUTH: Yes—
MAMA: We ain’t no business people, Ruth We just plain working folks.
RUTH: Ain’t nobody business people till they go into business. Walter Lee say colored people ain’t never going to start getting ahead till they start gambling on some different kinds of things in the world—investments and things.
MAMA: What done got into you, girl? Walter Lee done finally sold you on investing.
RUTH: No. Mama, something is happening between Walter and me. I don’t know what it is—but he needs something—something I can’t give him any more. He needs this chance, Lena.
MAMA: But liquor, honey—
RUTH: Well—like Walter say—I spec people going to always be drinking themselves some liquor.
MAMA: Well—whether they drinks it or not ain’t none of my business. But whether I go into business selling it to ’em is, and I don’t want that on my ledger this late in life. (stopping suddenly and studying her daughter-in-law) Ruth Younger, what’s the matter with you today? You look like you could fall over right there.
RUTH: I’m tired.
MAMA: Then you better stay home from work today.
RUTH: I can’t stay home. She’d be calling up the agency and screaming at them, “My girl didn’t come in today —send me somebody! My girl didn’t come in!” Oh, she just have a fit ...
MAMA: Well, let her have it. I’ll just call her up and say you got the flu—
RUTH (laughing): Why the flu?
MAMA: ’Cause it sounds respectable to ’em. Something white people get, too. They know ’bout the flu. Otherwise they think you been cut up or something when you tell ’em you sick.
RUTH: I got to go in. We need the money.
MAMA: Somebody would of thought my children done all but starved to death the way they talk about money here late. Child, we got a great big old check coming tomorrow.
RUTH (sincerely, but also self-righteously): Now that’s your money. It ain’t got nothing to do with me. We all feel like that—Walter and Bennie and me—even Travis.
MAMA (thoughtfully, and suddenly very far away): Ten thousand dollars —
RUTH: Sure is wonderful.
MAMA: Ten thousand dollars.
RUTH: You know what you should do, Miss Lena? You should take yourself a trip somewhere. To Europe or South America or someplace—
MAMA (throwing up her hands at the thought): Oh, child!
RUTH: I’m serious. Just pack up and leave! Go on away and enjoy yourself some. Forget about the family and have yourself a ball for once in your life—
After Reading

7. What are the conflicting attitudes toward the role of money in this family. What does money mean to each of the main characters? Identify the textual evidence to support your response.

Check Your Understanding

Writing Prompt: Select one of the following writing options for synthesizing the ideas of multiple texts into one. Be sure to:

• Demonstrate a consideration of the texts in the activity.
• Present a clear thesis or controlling idea.
• Smoothly synthesize the ideas.
• Use a variety of sentence structures.

Prompt 1: Choose three separate quotations—a money quote, a line from the poem “Money,” and a line from A Raisin in the Sun—that could provide evidence or a jumping off point for your discussion of the question: How important is money to attaining the American Dream?

Prompt 2: Express a personal attitude toward money (perhaps agreeing or disagreeing with one of the quotes about money on page 70) incorporating direct support of your thinking from three of the texts in this activity.

Prompt 3: In an essay that synthesizes ideas from three of the texts in this activity for support, take a position that defends, challenges, or qualifies the claim the money is an essential part of achieving the American Dream.
Learning Targets

• Analyze multiple texts to identify key ideas.
• Synthesize information to make text-to-text connections.

Before Reading
1. How does work figure in your future? What has work to do with the dream and promise of American success?

During Reading
2. Analyze the poem using a reading strategy like TP-CASTT to direct your annotation in the margins.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR
Martín Espada is an award-winning poet who was born in 1957 in Brooklyn, N.Y. He has a law degree from Northeastern University and teaches creative writing at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

Who Burns for the Perfection of Paper

by Martín Espada

At sixteen, I worked after high school hours at a printing plant that manufactured legal pads: Yellow paper

5 stacked seven feet high and leaning as I slipped cardboard between the pages, then brushed red glue

10 up and down the stack. No gloves: fingertips required for the perfection of paper, smoothing the exact rectangle. Sluggish by 9 PM, the hands till both palms burned at the punchclock.

15 would slide along suddenly sharp paper, and gather slits thinner than the crevices of the skin, hidden. Then the glue would sting, hands oozing...

Ten years later, in law school, I knew that every legal pad was glued with the sting of hidden cuts, that every open lawbook was a pair of hands upturned and burning.

After Reading

3. After reading the poem, “Who Burns for the Perfection of Paper,” complete the following chart.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>“Who Burns for the Perfection of Paper”</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Choose a statement that reflects what the speaker learned from his work.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Write out and create a visual of the last image of the poem.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What do you think the title means?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Write an interpretive statement about the speaker’s realization.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

During Reading

4. Analyze the interview “Roberto Acuña Talks About Farm Workers,” written by Studs Terkel, using a reading strategy like SOAPSTone to guide your thinking.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Studs Terkel (1912–2008), famous Chicago radio broadcaster, interviewer, and writer, was born Louis Terkel in 1912 in New York. A Pulitzer Prize winner for his interviews and oral histories, Terkel has written more than two dozen books, but he is probably most famous for his oral histories.
Nonfiction

“Roberto Acuna Talks About Farm Workers” from Working

by Studs Terkel

I walked out of the fields two years ago. I saw the need to change the California feudal system, to change the lives of farm workers, to make these huge corporations feel they’re not above anybody. I am thirty-four years old and I try to organize for the United Farm Workers of America.…

If you’re picking lettuce, the thumbnails fall off cause they’re banged on the box. Your hands get swollen. You can’t slow down because the foreman sees you’re so many boxes behind and you’d better get on. But people would help each other. If you’re feeling bad that day, somebody who’s feeling pretty good would help. Any people that are suffering have to stick together, whether they like it or not, whether they be black, brown, or pink.…

I began to see how everything was so wrong. When growers can have an intricate watering system to irrigate their crops but they can’t have running water inside the houses of workers. Veterinarians tend to the needs of domestic animals but they can’t have medical care for the workers. They can have land subsidies1 for the growers but they can’t have adequate unemployment compensation for the workers. They treat him like a farm implement. In fact, they treat their implements better and their domestic animals better. They have heat and insulated2 barns for the animals but the workers live in beat-up shacks with no heat at all.

Illness in the fields is 120 percent higher than the average rate for industry. It’s mostly back trouble, rheumatism, and arthritis, because of the damp weather and the cold. Stoop labor is very hard on a person. Tuberculosis is high. And now because of the pesticides, we have many respiratory diseases.

The University of California at Davis had government experiments with pesticides and chemicals. They get a bigger crop each year. They haven’t any regard as to what safety precautions are needed. In 1964 and ’65, an airplane was spraying these chemicals on the fields. Spraying rigs they’re called. Flying low, the wheels got tangled in the fence wire. The pilot got up, dusted himself off, and got a drink of water. He died of convulsions. The ambulance attendants got violently sick because of the pesticide he had on his person. A little girl was playing around a sprayer. She stuck her tongue on it. She died instantly.

These pesticides affect the farm worker through the lungs. He breathes it in. He gets no compensation. All they do is say he’s sick. They don’t investigate the cause.

There were times when I felt I couldn’t take it anymore. It was 105 in the shade and I’d see endless rows of lettuce and I felt my back hurting.…. I felt the frustration of not being able to get out of the fields. I was getting ready to jump any foreman who looked at me cross-eyed. But until two years ago, my world was still very small.

My Notes

GRAMMAR & USAGE
Parallel Structure
Repeating a grammatical structure, even one as simple as an infinitive phrase, creates rhythm and emphasis through parallel structure. Notice that Roberto Acuna emphasizes his commitment with parallel infinitive phrases modifying need:
“…to change the California feudal system, to change the lives of farm workers, to make these huge corporations feel they’re not above anybody.”

KEY IDEAS AND DETAILS
Why does Acuna make the point that farm tools and farm animals are treated well by their owners?

1 subsidy (n.): a grant or sum of money
2 insulated (adj.): protected from heat and/or cold
I would read all these things in the papers about Cesar Chavez and I would denounce\(^3\) him because I still had that thing about becoming a first class patriotic citizen. In Mexicali\(^4\) they would pass out leaflets and I would throw ‘em away. I never participated. The grape boycott didn’t affect me much because I was in lettuce. It wasn’t until Chavez came to Salinas\(^5\) where I was working in the fields, that I saw what a beautiful man he was. I went to this rally, I still intended to stay with the company. But something—I don’t know—I was close to the workers. They couldn’t speak English and wanted me to be their spokesman in favor of going on strike. I don’t know—I just got caught up with it all, the beautiful feeling of solidarity.

You’d see the people on the picket lines at four in the morning, at the camp fires, heating up beans and coffee and tortillas. It gave me a sense of belonging. These were my own people and they wanted change. I knew this is what I was looking for. I just didn’t know it before.

My mom had always wanted me to better myself. I wanted to better myself because of her. Now when the strikes started, I told her I was going to join the union and the whole movement. I told her I was going to work without pay. She said she was proud of me. (His eyes glisten. A long, long pause.) See, I told her I wanted to be with my people. If I were a company man, no one would like me anymore. I had to belong to somebody and this was it right here. She said, “I pushed you in your early years to try to better yourself and get a social position. But I see that’s not the answer. I know I’ll be proud of you.”

All kinds of people are farm workers, not just Chicanos. Filipinos started the strike. We have Puerto Ricans and Appalachians too, Arabs, some Japanese, some Chinese. At one time they used us against each other. But now they can’t and they’re scared, the growers. They can organize conglomerates. Yet when we try organization to better our lives, they are afraid. Suffering people never dreamed it could be different. Cesar Chavez tells them this and they grasp the idea—and this is what scares the growers.

Now the machines are coming in. It takes skill to operate them. But anybody can be taught. We feel migrant workers should be given the chance. They got one for grapes. They got one for lettuce. They have cotton machines that took jobs away from thousands of farm workers. The people wind up in the ghettos of the cities, their culture, their families, their unity destroyed.

We’re trying to stipulate\(^6\) it in our contract that the company will not use any machinery without the consent of the farm workers. So we can make sure the people being replaced by the machines will know how to operate the machines.

Working in the fields is not in itself a degrading job. It’s hard, but if you’re given regular hours, better pay, decent housing, unemployment, and medical compensation, pension plans—we have a very relaxed way of living. But growers don’t recognize us as persons. That’s the worst thing, the way they treat you. Like we have no brains. Now we see they have no brains. They have only a wallet in their head. The more you squeeze it the more they cry out.

---

\(^3\) denounce (v.): publicly declare to be wrong
\(^4\) Mexicali (mek’ si kal’ é): Capital of the Mexican state of Baja California Norte
\(^5\) Salinas (so le’ nas): City in west central California
\(^6\) stipulate (v.): demand or specify a condition
If we had proper compensation we wouldn’t have to be working seventeen hours a day and following the crops. We could stay in one area and it would give us roots. Being a migrant, it tears the family apart. You get in debt. You leave the area penniless. The children are the ones hurt the most. They go to school three months in one place and then on to another. No sooner do they make friends, they are uprooted again. Right here, your childhood is taken away. So when they grow up, they’re looking for this childhood they have lost.

If people could see—in the winter, ice on the fields. We’d be on our knees all day long. We’d build fires and warm up real fast and go back onto the ice. We’d be picking watermelons in 105 degrees all day long. When people have melons or cucumber or carrots or lettuce, they don’t know how they got on their table and the consequences to the people who picked it. If I had enough money, I would take busloads of people out to the fields and into the labor camps. Then they’d know how that fine salad got on their table.

After Reading
5. With a partner, review the text to determine Acuna’s attitudes toward different types of workers. List the jobs in the essay and classify them into at least two categories.

Check Your Understanding
Writing Prompt: Compose an argumentative essay in which you develop a position on the difference between an immigrant’s sense of opportunity and a citizen’s sense of opportunity in this country. Also, discuss how the dream of a future is the same.

Synthesize your ideas on what the United States offers native-born citizens toward achieving their American Dream and what immigrants see as the promise of America. Be sure to:
• Write a thesis statement that clearly states your position.
• Choose an audience and address their knowledge needs, as well as concerns about immigration, values, and possible biases.
• Paraphrase, summarize, and use quotations to develop your claim fairly and thoroughly, acknowledging its strengths and limitations.
• Acknowledge potential counterclaims fairly and provide thorough evidence to refute them or to convince your audience that your claim is stronger.
• Provide an effective conclusion.
The Road to Success

Learning Targets

• Analyze a written argument, identifying how the argument is supported.
• Revise a working definition of the American Dream.

Before Reading

1. So far, the American Dream has been presented in relationship to hope and dreams, work and money. In this activity, you will see juxtaposed two different visions of the American Dream of opportunity for all. Barack Obama’s story is one of access and success while William Zinsser argues that there is something important about failure. After reading these pieces, you will complete and polish your own definition of the American Dream.

2. Before you read, revisit the definition of the American Dream that you have been developing during the course of the unit. How has your thinking about the American Dream grown?

During Reading

3. As you read the following keynote address, mark the text for examples that will help you define the concept of the American Dream.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Barack Obama (b. 1961) is the 44th President of the United States. As a senator from Illinois, Obama rose to national prominence after giving a speech at the 2004 Democratic National Convention. He worked as a civil rights lawyer and a teacher prior to entering politics. In 2008, he was elected as the first African American president of the United States.

Speech

Excerpt from

Keynote Address to the 2004 Democratic National Convention

by Barack Obama

1 On behalf of the great state of Illinois, crossroads of a nation, land of Lincoln, let me express my deep gratitude for the privilege of addressing this convention. Tonight is a particular honor for me because, let’s face it, my presence on this stage is pretty unlikely. My father was a foreign student, born and raised in a small village in Kenya. He grew up herding goats, went to school in a tin-roof shack. His father—my grandfather—was a cook, a domestic servant to the British.

2 But my grandfather had larger dreams for his son. Through hard work and perseverance my father got a scholarship to study in a magical place, America, that shone as a beacon of freedom and opportunity to so many who had come before.
3 While studying here, my father met my mother. She was born in a town on the other side of the world, in Kansas. Her father worked on oil rigs and farms through most of the Depression. The day after Pearl Harbor he signed up for duty, joined Patton’s army and marched across Europe. Back home, my grandmother raised a baby and went to work on a bomber assembly line. After the war, they studied on the G.I. Bill, bought a house through FHA, and moved west, all the way to Hawaii, in search of opportunity.

4 And they, too, had big dreams for their daughter, a common dream, born of two continents. My parents shared not only an improbable love; they shared an abiding faith in the possibilities of this nation. They would give me an African name, Barack, or “blessed,” believing that in a tolerant America your name is no barrier to success. They imagined me going to the best schools in the land, even though they weren’t rich, because in a generous America you don’t have to be rich to achieve your potential. They are both passed away now. Yet, I know that, on this night, they look down on me with pride.

5 I stand here today, grateful for the diversity of my heritage, aware that my parents’ dreams live on in my two precious daughters. I stand here knowing that my story is part of the larger American story, that I owe a debt to all of those who came before me, and that, in no other country on earth, is my story even possible. Tonight, we gather to affirm the greatness of our nation, not because of the height of our skyscrapers, or the power of our military, or the size of our economy. Our pride is based on a very simple premise, summed up in a declaration made over two hundred years ago, “We hold these truths be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.”

6 That is the true genius of America, a faith in the simple dreams, the insistence on small miracles; that we can tuck in our children at night and know they are fed and clothed and safe from harm; that we can say what we think, write what we think, without hearing a sudden knock on the door; that we can have an idea and start our own business without paying a bribe; that we can participate in the political process without fear of retribution, and that our votes will be counted—or at least, most of the time.

7 This year, in this election, we are called to reaffirm our values and our commitments, to hold them against a hard reality and see how we are measuring up, to the legacy of our forbearers, and the promise of future generations. And fellow Americans—Democrats, Republicans, Independents—I say to you tonight: we have more work to do. More to do for the workers I met in Galesburg, Illinois, who are losing their union jobs at the Maytag plant that’s moving to Mexico, and now they’re having to compete with their own children for jobs that pay seven bucks an hour; more to do for the father I met who was losing his job and choking back tears, wondering how he would pay $4,500 a month for the drugs his son needs without the health benefits he counted on; more to do for the young woman in East St. Louis, and thousands more like her, who have the grades, have the drive, have the will, but doesn’t have the money to go to college.

8 Don’t get me wrong. The people I meet in small towns and big cities, in diners and office parks, they don’t expect government to solve all their problems. They know they have to work hard to get ahead and they want to. Go into the collar counties around Chicago, and people will tell you: They don’t want their tax money wasted by a welfare agency or the Pentagon. Go into any inner city neighborhood, and folks will tell you that government alone can’t teach kids to learn. They know that parents have to teach, that children can’t achieve unless we raise their expectations and turn off the television sets and eradicate the slander that says a black youth with a book is acting white. They know those things. People don’t expect government to solve all their problems. But they sense, deep in their bones, that with just a slight change in priorities, we can make sure that every child in America has a decent shot at life, and that the doors of opportunity remain open to all. They know we can do better. And they want that choice…. John Kerry believes in America. And he knows it’s not enough for just some of us to prosper. For alongside our famous individualism, there’s another ingredient in the American saga, a belief that we are connected as one people. If there’s a child on the south side of Chicago who can’t read, that matters to me, even if it’s not my child. If there’s a senior citizen somewhere who can’t pay for their prescription drugs and has to choose between medicine and the rent, that makes my life poorer, even if it’s not my grandmother. If there’s an Arab American family being rounded up without benefit of an attorney or due process, that threatens my civil liberties. It is that fundamental belief—it is that fundamental belief—I am my brother’s keeper, I am my sisters’ keeper—that makes this country work. It’s what allows us to pursue our individual dreams, yet still come together as a single American family.” “E pluribus unum,” out of many, one.

9 Now even as we speak, there are those who are preparing to divide us, the spin masters and negative ad peddlers who embrace the politics of anything goes. Well, I say to them tonight, there’s not a liberal America and a conservative America—there’s the United States of America. There’s not a black America and white America and Latino America and Asian America; there’s the United States of America. The pundits like to slice-and-dice our country into Red States and Blue States; Red States for Republicans, Blue States for Democrats. But I’ve got news for them, too. We worship an awesome God in the Blue States, and we don’t like federal agents poking around our libraries in the Red States. We coach Little League in the Blue States and, yes, we’ve got some gay friends in the Red States. There are patriots who opposed the war in Iraq and patriots who supported the war in Iraq. We are one people, all of us pledging allegiance to the stars and stripes, all of us defending the United States of America.

10 In the end, that’s what this election is about. Do we participate in a politics of cynicism or a politics of hope? John Kerry calls on us to hope. John Edwards calls on us to hope. I’m not talking about blind optimism here—the almost willful ignorance that thinks unemployment will go away if we just don’t talk about it, or the health care crisis will solve itself if we just ignore it. That’s not what I’m talking about. I’m talking about something more substantial. It’s the hope of slaves sitting around a fire singing freedom songs; the hope of immigrants setting out for distant shores; the hope of a young naval lieutenant bravely patrolling the Mekong Delta; the hope of a mill worker’s son who dares to defy the odds; the hope of a skinny kid with a funny name who believes that America has a place for him, too. Hope in the face of difficulty, hope in the face of uncertainty, the audacity of hope!

11 In the end, that is God’s greatest gift to us, the bedrock of this nation; the belief in things not seen; the belief that there are better days ahead. I believe we can give our middle class relief and provide working families with a road to opportunity. I believe we can provide jobs to the jobless, homes to the homeless, and reclaim young people in cities across America from violence and despair. I believe that we have a righteous wind at our backs, and that as we stand on the crossroads of history, we can make the right choices, and meet the challenges that face us….
The Right to Fail

by William Zinsser

1 I like “dropout” as an addition to the American language because it’s brief and it’s clear. What I don’t like is that we use it almost entirely as a dirty word.

2 We only apply it to people under twenty-one. Yet an adult who spends his days and nights watching mindless TV programs is more of a dropout than an eighteen-year-old who quits college, with its frequently mindless courses, to become, say, a VISTA volunteer. For the young, dropping out is often a way of dropping in.

3 To hold this opinion, however, is little short of treason in America. A boy or girl who leaves college is branded a failure—and the right to fail is one of the few freedoms that this country does not grant its citizens. The American dream is a dream of “getting ahead,” painted in strokes of gold wherever we look. Our advertisements and TV commercials are a hymn to material success, our magazine articles a toast to people who made it to the top. Smoke the right cigarette or drive the right car—so the ads imply—and girls will be swooning into your deodorized arms or caressing your expensive lapels. Happiness goes to the man who has the sweet smell of achievement. He is our national idol, and everybody else is our national fink.

4 I want to put in a word for the fink, especially the teen-age fink, because if we give him time to get through his finkdom—if we release him from the pressure of attaining certain goals by a certain age—he has a good chance of becoming our national idol, a Jefferson or a Thoreau, a Buckminster Fuller or an Adlai Stevenson, a man with a mind of his own. We need mavericks and dissenters and dreamers far more than we need junior vice presidents, but we paralyze them by insisting that every step be a step up to the next rung of the ladder. Yet in the fluid years of youth, the only way for boys and girls to find their proper road is often to take a hundred side trips, poking out in different directions, faltering, drawing back, and starting again.

5 “But what if we fail?” they ask, whispering the dreadful word across the Generation Gap to their parents, who are back home at the Establishment nursing their “middle-class values” and cultivating their “goal oriented society.” The parents whisper back: “Don’t!”

6 What they should say is “Don’t be afraid to fail!” Failure isn’t fatal. Countless people have had a bout with it and come out stronger as a result. Many have even come out famous. History is strewn with eminent dropouts, “loners” who followed their own trail, not worrying about its odd twists and turns because they had faith in their own sense of direction. To read their biographies is always exhilarating, not only because they beat the system, but because their system was better than the one that they beat. Luckily, such rebels still turn up often enough to prove that individualism, though badly threatened, is not extinct. Much has been written, for instance, about the fitful scholastic career of Thomas P. F. Hoving, New York’s former Parks Commissioner and now director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. Hoving was a dropout’s dropout, entering and leaving schools as if they were motels, often at the request of the management. Still, he must have learned something during those unorthodox years, for he dropped in again at the top of his profession.

7 His case reminds me of another boyhood—that of Holden Caulfield in J. D. Salinger’s The Catcher in the Rye, the most popular literary hero of the postwar period. There is nothing accidental about the grip that this dropout continues to hold on the affections of an entire American generation. Nobody else, real or invented, has made such an engaging shambles of our “goal-oriented society,” so gratified our secret belief that the “phonies” are in power and the good guys up the creek. Whether Holden has also reached the top of his chosen field today is one of those speculations that delight fanciers of good fiction. I speculate that he has. Holden Caulfield, incidentally, is now thirty-six.

8 I’m not urging everyone to go out and fail just for the sheer therapy of it, or to quit college just to coddle some vague discontent. Obviously it’s better to succeed than to flop, and in general a long education is more helpful than a short one. (Thanks to my own education, for example, I can tell George Eliot from T. S. Eliot, I can handle the pluperfect tense in French, and I know that Caesar beat the Helvetii because he had enough frumentum.) I only mean that failure isn’t bad in itself, or success automatically good.

9 Fred Zinnemann, who has directed some of Hollywood’s most honored movies, was asked by a reporter, when A Man for All Seasons won every prize, about his previous film, Behold a Pale Horse, which was a box-office disaster. “I don’t feel any obligation to be successful,” Zinneman replied. “Success can be dangerous—you feel you know it all. I’ve learned a great deal from my failures.” A similar point was made by Richard Brooks about his ambitious money loser, Lord Jim. Recalling the three years of his life that went into it, talking almost with elation about the troubles that befell his unit in Cambodia, Brooks told me that he learned more about his craft from this considerable failure than from his many earlier hits.

10 It’s a point, of course, that applies throughout the arts. Writers, playwrights, painters and composers work in the expectation of periodic defeat, but they wouldn’t keep going back into the arena if they thought it was the end of the world. It isn’t the end of the world. For an artist—and perhaps for anybody—it is the only way to grow.

11 Today’s younger generation seems to know that this is true, seems willing to take the risks in life that artists take in art. “Society,” needless to say, still has the upper hand—it sets the goals and condemns as a failure everybody who won’t play. But the dropouts and the hippies are not as afraid of failure as their parents and grandparents. This could mean, as their elders might say, that they are just plumb lazy, secure in the comforts of an affluent state. It could also mean, however, that they just don’t buy the old standards of success and are rapidly writing new ones.

12 Recently it was announced, for instance, that more than two hundred thousand Americans have inquired about service in VISTA (the domestic Peace Corps) and that, according to a Gallup survey, “more than 3 million American college students would serve VISTA in some capacity if given the opportunity.” This is hardly the road to riches... or to an executive suite. Yet I have met many of these young volunteers, and they are not pining for traditional success. On the contrary, they appear more fulfilled than the average vice-president with a swimming pool.

13 Who is to say, then, if there is any right path to the top, or even to say what the top consists of? Obviously the colleges don’t have more than a partial answer—otherwise the young would not be so disaffected with an education that they consider vapid. Obviously business does not have the answer—otherwise the young would not be so scornful of its call to be an organization man.

14 The fact is, nobody has the answer, and the dawning awareness of this fact seems to me one of the best things happening in America today. Success and failure are again becoming individual visions, as they were when the country was younger, not rigid categories. Maybe we are learning again to cherish this right of every person to succeed on his own terms and to fail as often as necessary along the way.

After Reading

4. To understand Zinsser’s point more thoroughly, use the SOAPSTone strategy to analyze and clarify his ideas.

5. How does Zinsser’s piece complicate, confirm, or challenge what you have learned about the American Dream? Can the American Dream be both failure and success?

Defend, Challenge, Qualify

When analyzing texts and synthesizing ideas, you should think in terms of defending, challenging, or qualifying statements from the texts you read. Use these concepts as you respond to the Check Your Understanding.

Check Your Understanding

Imagine Obama and Zinsser having a conversation about the American Dream. What would the conversation sound like? In a small group, collaborate to identify which areas (statements) the two authors would defend, where they would qualify each other’s statements, and where they would challenge or completely disagree about ideas.
Learning Targets
- Synthesize multiple sources in order to defend, challenge, or qualify a particular position
- Collaborate to prepare a formal academic conversation asserting a claim, presenting evidence and come to a decision.

Structured Academic Controversy
In preparation for the writing you will do on Embedded Assessment 2, you will now participate in a small-group discussion model designed to achieve three goals:
- to gain a deeper understanding of an issue
- to find common ground
- and to make a decision based on evidence and logic.

The Issue: Does the United State still provide access to the American Dream for everyone?

In this activity, you will research and defend one side of an argument:
Side A: Some would say that the American Dream is not real.

Side B: Others would suggest that with hard work and tenacity anyone could have access to the American Dream.

Side A
Yes, the American Dream is still a reality.

Side B
No, the American Dream no longer exists.

Conducting Research
1. With your partner, review the reading and thinking that you have done so far in this unit using the lens of your assigned position. What evidence do you have to support your position fairly and thoroughly? Research and organize evidence to support your side of the argument and write a statement of your position or answer to the question.

Types of Evidence:
- Facts and Statistics
- Analogy (figurative or literal)
- Personal Experience or Anecdote
- Illustrative Example
- Expert/Personal Testimony
- Hypothetical Case
2. To present a fair and balanced argument, you also need to research potential counterclaims and evidence that acknowledges their strengths and limitations.

3. To appeal to an audience, a writer and/or speaker uses a variety of evidence to support claims. As you research evidence, consider your audience’s knowledge, concerns, values, and possible biases. Use a table like the one below to organize your initial research.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evidence and Support</th>
<th>Type of Evidence</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Position Presentation

4. In groups of four, present your position and evidence to the groups with the opposing argument. Be sure to:
   - Take notes while the other argument is being presented and prepare to ask clarifying questions and restate the opponent’s position.
   - Be fair and thorough in the presentation of your claim and evidence. Respect the norms of formal presentations, giving turns and speaking in a collegial but formal style.

5. Create a graphic organizer for your note-taking during the discussion of the issue. Proceed in the following sequence:
   - The Side A group presents its argument and evidence, including counterclaims (concessions and refutations).
     Notes from the presentation:

     Side B restates Side A’s argument(s).
     Restate the argument:

     The Side B group presents its argument and evidence, including counterclaims (concessions and refutations).
     Notes from the presentation:

     Side A restates Side B’s argument(s).
     Restate the argument:
Reaching Consensus: Discussion
5. At this stage of the discussion, each side abandons its side and the group of four begins to work together to build consensus regarding the prompt using evidence gathered during their initial conversation.

Publishing Your Position
6. Together, craft a position that states the group position and decide what evidence supports the consensus decision on whether the United States still provides access to the American Dream.

Getting Ready for the Embedded Assessment
7. Begin by reading and discussing the prompt from the Embedded Assessment and then brainstorming three different ways to respond to this type of prompt: by defending, challenging, or qualifying it.

Prompt: Defend, challenge, or qualify the statement that America still provides access to the American Dream.

Response 1 (Defend):

Response 2 (Challenge):

Response 3 (Qualify):

Check Your Understanding
As a group, review the texts you have read in unit 1. Brainstorm how you could use several of those texts to defend, challenge, or qualify the prompt.
Synthesizing the American Dream

Assignment

Your assignment is to synthesize at least three to five sources and your own observations to defend, challenge, or qualify the statement that America still provides access to the American Dream. This question requires you to integrate a variety of sources (3–5) into a coherent, well-written argumentative essay. Your argument should be central; the sources and your observations should support this argument.

Planning and Prewriting

- What are the elements of a strong synthesis paper, and how can you use these elements as a sort of “To Do List” for your planning?
- What texts from this unit provide relevant evidence for your own answer to the essay prompt?

Drafting

- How will you clearly voice your position on the topic without overlooking the nuances and complexities of the topic?
- What assumptions or beliefs are either spoken or unspoken in your sources?
- How do the ideas in your selected sources relate to your position? Do they agree, disagree, or offer a sort qualification to your ideas?

Evaluating and Revising

- Do you consistently show how each selected quote from your sources relates to your central position?
- How can you make sure that your syntax is sophisticated and varied, especially the openings of your sentences?
- Are your ideas sequenced in the best way to guide your reader through your ideas and present a convincing argument? How could re-ordering some of your ideas improve this?

Editing and Publishing

- How will you check for grammatical and technical accuracy?
- What sort of outside resources can help you to check your draft (e.g., a style guide such as MLA, a dictionary, etc.)?
- How will you prepare yourself to present this essay to an audience?

Reflection

After completing this Embedded Assessment, think about how you went about accomplishing this assignment, and respond to the following:

- In what ways did your various sources validate your ideas about the American Dream, and in what ways did they add new elements or depth to your thinking?
SCORING GUIDE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Scoring Criteria</th>
<th>Exemplary</th>
<th>Proficient</th>
<th>Emerging</th>
<th>Incomplete</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ideas</td>
<td>The essay • effectively synthesizes sources to defend, challenge, or qualify the central claim of the prompt • provides a strong thesis that anticipates audience needs • uses convincing, thorough, and relevant evidence • acknowledges and refutes counterclaims fairly and thoroughly.</td>
<td>The essay • adequately synthesizes sources to defend, challenge, or qualify the central claim of the prompt • provides a straightforward thesis that briefly contextualizes the issue • uses support that clearly connects the various source material to the writer's position.</td>
<td>The essay • attempts to synthesize sources but inadequately defends, challenges, or qualifies the central claim of the prompt • provides a thesis that attempts to contextualize the issue • uses support that connects the source material but with lapses in accuracy or completeness.</td>
<td>The essay • tries to synthesize sources but does not defend, challenge, or qualify the claim of the prompt • includes a weak thesis or one that is lost in a summary of sources • includes support that paraphrases source material with no commentary or analysis.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Structure</td>
<td>The essay • is organized to effectively reinforce the ideas of the argument • moves smoothly with successful use of transitions that enhance coherence • concludes by going beyond a summary of the thesis by illuminating how the writers' positions will continue to influence the reader.</td>
<td>The essay • is organized to support the ideas of the argument • arranges ideas so they are easy to follow, using transitions to move between ideas • includes a conclusion that is logical yet may be somewhat repetitive to the thesis.</td>
<td>The essay • follows a simplistic organization with lapses in structure or coherence • arranges ideas in a confusing way and with an inconsistent use of transitions • includes a conclusion that may be logical yet is too close to the original thesis.</td>
<td>The essay • shows a lack of organization that detracts from argument, making the ideas difficult to follow • may jump too rapidly between ideas and lack transitions • includes a conclusion that returns directly to the attempted thesis.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Use of Language</td>
<td>The essay • demonstrates a mature style that advances the writer's ideas • employs precise diction and skillful use of syntax, with keen attention to varied sentence openings, which helps to create a convincing voice • follows standard writing conventions (including accurate citation of sources).</td>
<td>The essay • demonstrates a style that adequately supports the writer's ideas • uses logical diction and syntax, with some attention to varied sentence openings, creating a suitable voice • largely follows standard writing conventions (including accurate citation of sources); errors do not seriously impede readability.</td>
<td>The essay • demonstrates an inconsistent style that minimally supports the writer's idea • unevenly uses diction and syntax to convey a suitable voice, with few varied sentence openings • contains errors in standard writing conventions that may impede readability; some sources are inaccurately cited.</td>
<td>The essay • demonstrates a limited style that ineffectively supports the writer's ideas • contains lapses in diction or syntax that may not allow a suitable voice to sustain throughout the essay; sentence openings may be repetitive • contains errors that impede readability; sources may be inaccurately cited.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>